ELLISON,2018 An Englishwoman in a Turkish Harem (Classic Reprint) Grace Ellison,2017-11-26 Excerpt from An Englishwoman in a Turkish Harem These letters do not claim to be a psycho logical study of Turkish character nor are they a political or historical treatise They are only an Englishwoman s impressions of Turkish harem life written during a very happy and in teresting visit amongst Turkish friends Should I not have said in these letters what my Turkish sisters expected me to say should I not have understood their civilization as they hoped I would understand it I feel sure they will forgive one who they know has always been and will always be their sincere friend To correct The errors prejudice and hatred which have become almost part of the British national attitude towards Turkey is not an easy task If these letters have been able in ever so small a way to spread some of the enthusiasm and love I feel for a nation which Europe has so severely censured they will at least have justified the reason of their existence My thanks are due to the editor of the Daily Telegraph for allowing me to reproduce those letters which have appeared in the columns of About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that

World War I in Mesopotamia Nadia Atia,2015-01-12 The Mesopotamian campaign during World War I was a critical moment in Britain's position in the Middle East With British and British Indian troops fighting in places which have become well known in the wake of the 2003 invasion of Iraq such as Basra the campaign led to the establishment of the British Mandate in Iraq in 1921 Nadia Atia believes that in order to fully understand Britain's policies in creating the nascent state of Iraq we must first look at how the war shaped Britons' conceptions of the region Atia does this through a cultural and military history of the changing British perceptions of Mesopotamia since the period before World War I when it was under Ottoman rule Drawing on a wide variety of historical and literary sources including the writing of key figures such as Gertrude Bell Mark Sykes and Arnold Wilson but focusing mainly on the views and experiences of ordinary men and women whose stories and experiences of the war have less frequently been told Atia examines the cultural and social legacy of World War I in the Middle East and how this affected British attempts to exert influence in the region

The harem, slavery and British imperial culture Diane Robinson-Dunn,2017-03-01 This book focuses on British efforts to suppress the traffic in female slaves destined for Egyptian harems during the late nineteenth century It considers this campaign in relation to gender debates in England and examines the ways in which the assumptions and dominant imperialist discourses of these abolitionists were challenged by the newly established Muslim communities in England as well as by English people who converted to or were sympathetic with Islam While previous scholars have treated antislavery activity in Egypt first and foremost as an extension of earlier efforts to abolish plantation slavery in the New World this book considers it in terms of encounters with Islam during a period which it argues marked a new departure in Anglo Muslim relations This approach illuminates the role of Islam in the creation of English national identities within the global cultural system of the British Empire This book would appeal to those with an interest in British imperial history Islam gender feminism and women's studies slavery and race the formation of national identities global processes Orientalism and Middle Eastern studies
