

Replacing the Gateway 400VTX Keyboard

This package includes a replacement keyboard for your Gateway desktop system, and three ground connections.

Tools you need

You need a small Phillips screwdriver that fits in the screws to replace the keyboard.

Preventing static electricity discharge

This computer needs your attention and protection against its static electricity, and failure to discharge electricity safely.

Warning

Static can permanently damage electronic equipment. Disconnect computer from power, and ground your discharge by touching with grounded object (see page 100) before the repair.

Warning

Be aware of static electricity discharge voltage and frequency, and use grounded and static protection. Use the system and remove static charges during the repair.

Before replacing the keyboard, follow these guidelines:

- Turn off your computer.
- Make a grounding safety loop connection at static discharge device, and ground it to a static metal part of your equipment, or other grounded connection.

Warning

Be aware that all static should be not used any other way but the way used in the manual.

- Repair or test static device or other equipment or other grounded device.
