Dear Mr. Kane,

It is with mixed emotions that I write this letter of farewell as your principal. A wonderful opportunity has surfaced, and I find myself needing to exit St. August Elementary for a new job. I will soon be starting in the role of Dean at City College.

Under my reign, we've shared numerous accomplishments and have faced some challenges. Yet, together, we have a stronger and much better school. I would like to take this opportunity to extend my sincerest thank you to you and the staff of St.

women were to this media phenomenon in its first one hundred years In the nineteenth century Zackodnik reveals the Black press was second only to the Black church in its centrality to Black politics and communities but histories of its development have long credited its founding and development to the Black men who were its editors Despite their underrepresentation in the leadership of Black public politics and the Black press women were overrepresented in the mutual benevolent moral improvement and literary societies that functioned as community centers of political oratorical and print culture work These societies supplied the Black press with content a readership and distribution nodes in Black communities throughout the nation Zackodnik examines the vital opportunity that this networking of the Black press with literary societies offered Black women readers to enter Black print space and advance communal goals She also explores how Black women gained a foothold within publications often initially with gateway genres such as letters to the editor and women s columns and shaped the Black press This book will change how we understand the early Black press and overlooked Black feminist print practices
