Noise Measurement Procedures Manual Tasmanian Government - Department of Primary Industries, Water & Environment, 2004 Measurement of Noise Figure of a X-Band Waveguide Mixer with Tunnel Diode Gustav H. Blaeser, 1964 Noise figure measurements of an X band tunnel diode mixer must be carried out with extreme care since spurious responses can often produce incorrect results At microwave frequencies a waveguide system with a plunger at one side of the diode is used and it is important that one terminal of the diode be isolated from the waveguide wall when the bias voltage is applied The output of the mixer containing the difference frequency is connected to the input of an amplifier with a series combination of bias components This series combination contains additional inductance and capacitance other than that of the 30 Mcps amplifier and can produce resonance effects when the tunnel diode is operated in the positive region close to the peak current thereby leading to an error in the noise figure measurement Correct and incorrect noise figures are compared A noise figure of 3 db free of spurious responses has been measured for a tunnel diode D4168D operated at a pump frequency of 9 205 Gc and a difference frequency of 30 Mcps in an X band waveguide mixer Author Industrial Noise Manual American Industrial Hygiene Association, 1958 LEQ Noise Meter Test System D C.
