Many parents and other stakeholders have been made fearful by this education establishment. What's more important to humans: nutrition or education? Nutrition is more important because it is the prerequisite for other human activities including education. What organizations provide food and who pays for the food? Food is provided by for-profit farmers, for-profit processors, for-profit wholesalers and for-profit retailers. Most food is purchased with the consumer's own money, but a significant amount is purchased by low-income individuals using food stamps. Why can't education be provided similarly using education stamps? We trust for-profit enterprises to provide our food. Why can't we trust for-profit enterprises to provide K-12 education? Fear-mongers have frightened us and made us into gullible, compliant socialists who despise commercial activities in education. Go to the supermarket and ponder its marvelous array of foods and then contemplate how a for-profit K-12 education sector would please and amaze its customers.

This volume sheds new light on the topic from different methodological and theoretical angles and offers evidence from a variety of cases on the why and how questions on populism's emergence and consolidation in Europe over the past 30 years. The volume, composed of eight chapters, investigates how different populist parties in the European Union have been affected by the various crises, disentangling the role of the Great Recession vis-à-vis other factors such as political and party system factors but also structural social changes or cultural opportunities in the growing strength of populist parties in various European countries. More specifically, the volume aims to promote critical discussion on the concept of populism, reflecting on its conceptual usability beyond the traditional party families to which it is usually related, use a preliminary theoretical clarification to shed new light on the different ways in which populism has been articulated in the various European countries, either in Continental and Southern Europe or in the lesser-known and studied East-Central countries since the economic crisis which has acted as an external shock for many party systems, either giving birth to new political actors or consolidating existing ones, investigate the connections between populism and the national contextual political and cultural specificities that can determine the development of different types of populisms across countries.

elaborating on different configurations of triggering conditions for populism and reflecting on the limitations of a discrete conceptualisation of the phenomenon The chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of West European Politics The Michigan Journal, 2007
