Detection and Estimation of Working Memory States and Cognitive Functions Based on Neurophysiological Measures Felix Putze, Christian Mühl, Fabien Lotte, Stephen Fairclough, Christian Herff, 2019-02-05 Executive cognitive functions like working memory determine the success or failure of a wide variety of different cognitive tasks such as problem solving navigation or planning Estimation of constructs like working memory load or memory capacity from neurophysiological or psychophysiological signals would enable adaptive systems to respond to cognitive states experienced by an operator and trigger responses designed to support task performance e g by simplifying the exercises of a tutor system when the subject is overloaded or by shutting down distractions from the mobile phone The determination of cognitive states like working memory load is also useful for automated testing assessment or for usability evaluation While there exists a large body of research work on neural and physiological correlates of cognitive functions like working memory activity fewer publications deal with the application of this research with respect to single trial detection and real time estimation of cognitive functions in complex realistic scenarios Single trial classifiers based on brain activity measurements such as electroencephalography functional near infrared spectroscopy physiological signals or eye tracking

have the potential to classify affective or cognitive states based upon short segments of data For this purpose signal processing and machine learning techniques need to be developed and transferred to real world user interfaces The goal of this Frontiers Research Topic was to advance the State of the Art in signal based modeling of cognitive processes We were especially interested in research towards more complex and realistic study designs for example collecting data in the wild or investigating the interaction between different cognitive processes or signal modalities Bringing together many contributions in one format allowed us to look at the state of convergence or diversity regarding concepts methods and paradigms

Advances in Human Aspects of Transportation Neville Stanton, 2018-06-27 This book discusses the latest advances in research and development design operation and analysis of transportation systems and their complementary infrastructures It reports on both theories and case studies on road and rail aviation and maritime transportation Further it covers a wealth of topics from accident analysis vehicle intelligent control and human error and safety issues to next generation transportation systems model based design methods simulation and training techniques and many more A special emphasis is placed on smart technologies and automation in transport and on the user centered ergonomic and sustainable design of transport systems The book which is based on the AHFE 2018 International Conference on Human Factors in Transportation held in Orlando Florida USA on July 21 25 2018 mainly addresses the needs of transportation system designers industrial designers human computer interaction researchers civil and control engineers as well as vehicle system engineers Moreover it represents a timely source of information for transportation policy makers and social scientists whose work involves traffic safety management and sustainability issues in transport
