

It's All About Time

The Earth rotates, or spins on its axis, continuously. The axis is an imaginary line through the center of the Earth that connects the two poles. The Earth takes 24 hours to make one complete rotation. At any time, only half the planet faces the sun. The other half is in darkness. Twenty-four time zones have been set up to track the sun's east-to-west progress across the Earth. The United States lies in six of these zones.
