Most people do not stop to introspect about what reality really is. Usually, we use the word "reality" to mean what seems to be, or facts filtered through a biased lens. But, it seems there should be one reality. It should not be dependent on people's perception of what reality is. Reality is not based on thoughts, feelings, and physical sensations. These three elements disrupt that perceiving of reality. So, what is reality then?

In order to perceive reality in its true form, we should not add the filter of our thoughts, feelings, and physical sensations. Reality is simply what it is—nothing more, nothing less. It is said by science that reality is what is most fundamental, and that can be expressed through mathematics. The construction of the entirety of mathematics can be done with an empty set (The New Scientist). This nothingness, or blank sheet of existence, is reality. The state of consciousness without thought, feeling, or sensation is our original state. As long as we are injecting thoughts, feelings, and physical sensations into what we perceive, we are experiencing reality through a filter. For an example, you see a chair. If you see the chair without any thought, feeling, and physical sensation interrupting or changing how you perceive it,

Writing and Identity Roz Ivani?, 1998-03-15 Writing is not just about conveying content but also about the representation of self. One of the reasons people find writing difficult is that they do not feel comfortable with the me they are portraying in their writing. Academic writing in particular often poses a conflict of identity for students in higher education because the self which is inscribed in academic discourse feels alien to them. The main claim of this book is that writing is an act of identity in which people align themselves with socio culturally shaped subject positions and thereby play their part in reproducing or challenging dominant practices and discourses and the values, beliefs and interests which they embody. The first part of the book reviews recent understandings of social identity of the discursive construction of identity of literacy and identity and of issues of identity in research on academic writing. The main part of the book is based on a collaborative research project about writing and identity with mature age students providing a case study of one writer's dilemmas over the presentation of self, a discussion of the way in which writers' life histories shape their presentation of self in writing, an interview based study of issues of ownership and of accommodation and resistance to conventions for the presentation of self, linguistic analysis of the ways in which multiple often contradictory interests, values, beliefs and practices are inscribed in discourse conventions which set up a range of possibilities for selfhood for writers. The book ends with implications of the study for research on writing and identity and for the learning and teaching of academic writing. The book will be of interest to students and researchers in the fields of social identity, literacy, discourse analysis, rhetoric and composition studies and to all those concerned to understand what is involved in academic writing in order to provide wider access to higher education.

Language is complex. Written or spoken, the complexity of language makes the medium the versatile tool we need but also creates the potential for a wide variety of misunderstandings and mistakes. Whether we are attempting to understand a piece of fiction or writing a text to make our thoughts comprehensible to others, the complexity of language is both necessary and fraught. That said, the inevitable pitfalls don't mean we need to sacrifice precision or accuracy. This guide is a step-by-step process that offers hands-on methods for accurate analysis and precise essay construction. Chapter one deals with a variety of methods by which to approach stories and novels such that your analysis is structured on carefully constructed logical progression founded on the primary text rather than on hunches and guesswork, and chapter two offers infrastructures and scaffolding on which any essay can be structured. The structures included in chapter two are not a template and thus do not limit style or content; rather, they are based on a series of tasks that must be completed for an argument to be convincing. As such, the tasks offer a kind of map through the process of essay writing that always indicates your next step. Contrary to accepted mythologies about analyzing fiction and writing essays, neither is a guessing game, and this text can help you remove the guesswork from your own process.
