The Mystery of the Vanishing Lantern Light

On a cool autumn evening, siblings Mia and Noah visited the old park near their home. As they played, they noticed a flickering lantern light deep in the woods. "That's strange," Mia said, "no one goes there anymore." Curiosity got the better of them, and they decided to investigate. As they followed the light, it moved further away, as if it was leading them somewhere. The siblings exchanged uneasy glances but kept going, their footsteps crunching on the fallen leaves.

The light stopped near a weathered wooden bench, where they found an ancient journal. Its pages were yellowed and filled with sketches of the park as it once was, bustling with activity. A note inside read, "Follow the light to uncover what's been forgotten." As Mia held the journal, the lantern light moved again, this time toward the old fountain at the park's center. Noah noticed the fountain had an unusual marking on its base—a small carved keyhole.

Using the journal, they pieced together clues and found a hidden compartment near the keyhole. Inside, they discovered a rusty key and a folded map. The map led to an abandoned storage shed on the edge of the park. Inside the shed, they found a box of photos and letters revealing the park's history. The lantern light flickered one last time, then vanished. Mia and Noah realized they had uncovered a forgotten piece of their town's history and agreed to share it with everyone.

I. Direct Questions:

1. What did Mia and Noah notice in the woods?
2. Where did the lantern light stop for the first time?
