How to Use This Research Lesson:

- Discuss what students already know about ocean habitats and adaptations animals have made to survive. Explain we are using books or a computer to find answers to our questions.
- Share books, ebooks, online magazine articles, or online databases such as PebbleGo.com
- Introduce the Desert Habitats Lesson first. I usually use this as an example note taking activity. I fill out the first two boxes whole group with help from the students. Explain that note taking is finding the important words or phrases, NOT copying whole sentences. Students then fill out their own note taking sheets for the last four boxes.
- Discuss what is a source and source types. Emphasize the title of the source used and have students circle the source type.
- For the next class session, students are assigned an ocean animal to complete note taking. (individually or in pairs).
- I model the first box of note taking to review choosing the important words or phrases
