

1. What happens to your body when your immune system doesn't work as well as it should?
 - a. It becomes vulnerable to disease.
 - b. It produces less cells.
 - c. It functions better than normal.
 - d. It produces more cells.
2. Highlight 3 diseases that a person could die of if they've developed AIDS.

Understanding Features of HIV

HIV is a well-known and highly feared virus. There are many good reasons for that fear:

1. HIV has a high mortality rate; everyone who contracts HIV will die early. Once a person develops AIDS, his/her life expectancy is an average of 34 years. The last years are usually very poor quality; the victim spends much of his/her time sick and in pain, waiting the hospital for treatments.
2. There is no vaccine to prevent it and no cure to eliminate it. HIV has the ability to mutate—or change genetics and shape—constantly. Every time scientists develop a medicine that can recognize the virus, it has already changed.
3. HIV is a latent virus, so there are no clear symptoms. A latent virus becomes part of a person's cells and attacks later, sometimes after several years in wait. A person can be contagious for a decade or more before the disease becomes noticeable.
4. HIV spreads easily, by blood or other bodily fluids, transferring from an infected carrier to a new person.
5. One feature makes HIV truly unique from other diseases: it breaks and destroys the immune system. HIV destroys the system that should be guarding against it!

To summarize, HIV is a virus that attacks your immune system, specifically the white blood cells. It is easily spread, has no cure, and is very deadly. AIDS is the medical condition of a person with HIV whose white blood cells have dropped to a dangerously low number, causing him/her to become vulnerable to other diseases.

RECALL

1. Highlight the definition of latent virus.
2. What is the most unique—and most dangerous—characteristic of HIV?
 - a. It spreads easily.
 - b. It attacks the immune system.
 - c. It has no symptoms.
 - d. It is silent.
3. What makes treating the HIV virus almost impossible?
 - a. It is made of cells.
 - b. It doesn't change at all.
 - c. It can mutate into new shapes.
 - d. It spreads easily.
