- 1) Rootname module: The rootname for every courseware is coined from a concatenation of the author's name, courseware title, and courseware topic and courseware code. This way a unique name is formed for every courseware that is created irrespective of whether it is by the same author. The rootname is then stored in the courseware table with its corresponding courseware details (topic, author, title, code).
- 2) Objectives module: This section is linked to the Objectives of the courseware, thereby stating what is the aim of the courseware and what a student should be equipped with after studying the courseware.
- 3) Tutorial module: the tutorial module is divided into the lecture notes part and the media part. While the lecture notes (as the name implies) is culled from the lecturer's notes and/textbook, the media files are scenes captured during a lecturer's lecture. The media files help to further emulate the classroom experience
- 4) Question module: This section displays the question associated to each tutorial topic. In this module, students are exposed to questions on the courseware topic and the answers associated to each question supplied as well. It serves as a good revision venue. During the development of the quiz, the quiz builder in the web-based courseware authoring system wizard is used to input questions and save them directly to the quiz table along with their options and the right answer. These questions are saved against the current rootname
