Paper 9713/11
Written A 11

General comments

It was encouraging that there were a larger number of candidates, than had been the case in previous sessions, who appeared to have been well prepared for this assessment; however, there are still a large number who were not.

There were a number of candidates who clearly lacked the ability to perform well at this level.

It is still common to find candidates rote learning answers from past papers. This was particularly evident when, although questions might relate to a similar topic, the scenarios had changed markedly. In this paper, as with any exam paper at this standard, candidates are required to show a level of understanding as well as a depth of knowledge. As has been highlighted in previous reports, this cannot be achieved by simply repeating bullet points from previous mark schemes. The points listed on mark schemes are often a summary of the knowledge required to answer the question and should not be interpreted as an answer in itself. Candidates are required, in 'discuss' and 'explain' questions, to expand on the bullet points given in the mark scheme not just repeat them; they need to show an understanding of the scenario.

Comments on specific questions

Question 1

Many candidates did quite well on this question:

- (a) Several candidates answered this correctly but a number referred to hardware that would be needed or personal circumstances rather than the personal characteristics required.
- (b) Most candidates were able to name items of hardware but were frequently unable to describe the devices adequately. The scenario referred to the translation of documents so it was surprising to see a number of candidates failing to refer to documents in their answer.

Question 2

This question was surprisingly not well answered.

- (a) This was answered better than part (b) but, again, it seemed that many candidates were able to name the devices but were unable to describe them in any detail or failed to describe them at all. Some gave software answers but the main fault was the lack of precision in the description with answers such as 'microphones let you hear someone' when in fact it is speakers that let you hear. Another common answer was that 'webcams let you see someone' when of course it is monitors that enable you to see the other participants. Microphones and webcams are after all input devices.
- (b) Most candidates were unable to provide good reasons with again very general answers such as 'video conferencing lets you see them'. The mention of price was rarely expanded upon.
