

THE CORPUS JURIS-CYC ANNOTATIONS

Present all the current cases year by year, cumulatively under one alphabet.

State the new and developing law and not merely the holdings.

Show clearly and at once any extension, modification, distinction, limitation, exception, or qualification made by the new decisions to the text of the present work — THE CORPUS JURIS-CYC System.

Make the new and developing law and applications of the law alike accessible with the least amount of search and effort.

Discriminate and distinguish new law from merely cumulative precedents.

Reorganize in an orderly and scientific manner the thousands of decisions which are handed down each year to the rules and doctrines as they appear in the main body of the CORPUS JURIS-CYC System.

Point out and annotate new and difficult points and conflicts.

Supply a local Supplement for each State annually to answer the question, "What does my State hold?"

The result is a continuous supplement with CLASSIFICATION BY PRINCIPLES, dispensing with the artificialities which must arise in classification by facts. For there can be no better arrangement than one founded on the principles of the law, with their ramifications, exceptions, limitations and qualifications, scientifically stated. The principles in themselves afford the almost uniformity and permanency of arrangement whereby a growing science like the law is susceptible

To assert that the law of 1776 was just as good as to-day is to assert that the "new law" has not been added to, developed or changed, and that the 50,000 new decisions handed down each year are of no value to the profession.
