Rethinking Authority in Global Climate Governance Thomas Hickmann, 2015-10-16 In the past few years numerous authors have highlighted the emergence of transnational climate initiatives such as city networks private certification schemes and business self regulation in the policy domain of climate change While these transnational governance arrangements can surely contribute to solving the problem of climate change their development by different types of sub and non state actors does not imply a weakening of the intergovernmental level On the contrary many transnational climate initiatives use the international climate regime as a point of reference and have adopted various rules and procedures from international agreements Rethinking Authority in Global Climate Governance puts forward this argument and expands upon it using case studies which suggest that the effective operation of transnational climate initiatives strongly relies on the existence of an international regulatory framework created by nation states Thus this book emphasizes the centrality of the intergovernmental process clustered around the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change UNFCCC and underscores that multilateral treaty making continues to be more important than many scholars and policy makers suppose This book will be of great interest to students and scholars of global environmental politics climate change and sustainable development ENC Focus Review ,2003 The Railway and Engineering Review Walter Mason Camp,1905 Evaluation of the project “Strengthening the adaptive capacity and resilience of rural communities using micro watershed approaches to climate change and variability to attain sustainable food security in Cambodia” Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations ,2021-01-29 Cambodia is among the Least Developed Countries that continue to struggle with serious environmental issues among which are climate change water resources and land degradation The project implemented from 2014 to 2020 contributed to build the adaptive capacity of rural communities and reduce their vulnerability to climate change through micro watershed management and climate resilient agriculture practices through interventions at national sub national and community levels It was designed to address barriers at all levels local to national stemming from lack of awareness knowledge understanding and capacity concerning climate change adaptation and the absence of alternative livelihoods particularly affecting rural women The evaluation found that the project activities made some important steps in contributing to reducing vulnerability and increasing resilience for climate change adaptation in the pilot communes While the project managed to implement many of the outputs a number of issues and delays limited the effectiveness on the ground of this innovative yet ambitious project 30 Minute a Day Learning System Grade 1 Jodi Lee,Leigh Anne Easterling,Martha Swanson,Sarah Raines,2006-06 American Architect and the Architectural Review ,1903 Railway Review ,1912 International Review of Missions ,1919
