Background	The American Cancer Society (ACS), the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the National Cancer Institute (NCI), and the North American Association of Central Cancer Registries (NAACCR) collaborate annually to provide updates on cancer incidence and death rates and trends in these outcomes for the United States. This year's report includes incidence trends for human papillomavirus (HPV)–associated cancers and HPV vaccination (recommended for adolescents aged 11–12 years).
Methods	Data on cancer incidence were obtained from the CDC, NCI, and NAACCR, and data on mortality were obtained from the CDC. Long- (1975/1982–2009) and short-term (2000–2009) trends in age-standardized incidence and death rates for all cancers combined and for the leading cancers among men and among women were examined by joinpoint analysis. Prevalence of HPV vaccination coverage during 2008 and 2010 and of Papanicolaou (Pap) testing during 2010 were obtained from national surveys.
Results	Death rates continued to decline for all cancers combined for men and women of all major racial and ethnic groups and for most major cancer sites; rates for both sexes combined decreased by 1.5% per year from 2000 to 2009. Overall incidence rates decreased in men but stabilized in women. Incidence rates increased for two HPV-associated cancers (oropharynx, anus) and some cancers not associated with HPV (eg, liver, kidney, thyroid). Nationally, 32.0% (95% confidence interval [CI] = 30.3% to 33.6%) of girls aged 13 to 17 years in 2010 had received three doses of the HPV vaccine, and coverage was statistically significantly lower among the uninsured (14.1%, 95% CI = 9.4% to 20.6%) and in some Southern states (eg, 20.0% in Alabama [95% CI = 13.9% to 27.9%] and Mississippi [95% CI = 12.8% to 29.2%]), where cervical cancer rates were highest and recent Pap testing prevalence was the lowest.
Conclusions	The overall trends in declining cancer death rates continue. However, increases in incidence rates for some HPV-associated cancers and low vaccination coverage among adolescents underscore the need for additional prevention efforts for HPV-associated cancers, including efforts to increase vaccination coverage.

The American Cancer Society (ACS), the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the National Cancer Institute (NCI), and the North American Association of Central Cancer Registries (NAACCR) collaborate annually to provide updated cancer incidence and mortality data for the United States. The initial report documented the first steady decline in cancer death rates, beginning in the early 1990s, since national record keeping on vital statistics began in 1930 (1). In addition to providing updates on incidence and mortality patterns, each report features a topic of special interest (2–14). This report features the burden and trends in human papillomavirus (HPV)–associated cancers among persons aged 15 years or older and HPV vaccination coverage levels among adolescents aged 13 to 17 years.

Exposure to HPV is common through sexual contact, and most infections resolve over time. However, persistent infection with oncogenic HPV types is etiologically linked to cervical cancer (15), as well as cancers of the oropharynx (16), anus (17), vagina and vulva (18), and penis (19,20). Virtually all cervical cancers are due

Annual Cancer Report ,1995 13TH WORLD CANCER CERVIX ERADICATION DAY Prof. Dr. Niranjana Rout, Prof. Bhagyalakshmi Nayak, 2023-03-11 Cancer Cervix is the 4th most common cancer in women around the world India accounts for approximately 25% of global prevalence A study published in 2014 stated the crude incidence rate of cancer cervix is 20.2 per one lakh population in our country In our state Odisha there has been a gross increase of incidence approximately by 4% between 2008 and 2011 Also cancer cervix is the leading cause of cancer death in women in under developed countries Pap smear has been the gold standard screening test for cervical cancer since its introduction in 1949 It has helped reducing the cervical cancer mortality rates roughly to half New technology like immunocytochemistry assay for the simultaneous qualitative detection of the p16 and Ki 67 proteins in cervical cytology preparations is an adjunct to routine pap screening for high grade CIN with HPV infection Besides a potent vaccine against high risk HPV type 16 18 are available which can prevent 70% of all cancer cervix At present cancer cervix is a disease of great public health importance Spreading awareness is lacking in our population The ABC Foundation of Cuttack working in the field of public health since 2007 carried out a survey in 2011 in a group of population with educational qualification from Matric to M A and observed that 87.5% members were not aware of the role of HPV in causation of cancer cervix This provoked us to organize a programme on cancer cervix eradication in 2011 The highlights of this programme were the presence of Dr P C Mohapatra President of Federation of Obstetricians Gynaecologists Society of India FOGSI and Dr N C Parija President Indian Association of Pathologists and Microbiologists IAPM and their deliberations and suggestions boosted us to continue our efforts As a part of this programme we are 1 trying to coordinate the activities of similar workers and organisations and recognising their work by honouring them in different fora 2 trying to re orient medical personnels regarding diagnosis management and prevention of cancer cervix through CME symposia seminar lectures workshops etc 3 trying to create awareness among people regarding the signs symptoms of cancer cervix and the role of pap smear examination in early diagnosis of cancer cervix 4 trying to create awareness among people that HPV infection is the main culprit for development of cancer cervix and a potent vaccine is available to prevent HPV infection 5 trying to educate people to vaccinate their daughters against HPV infections and motivate mothers to do regular pap test for early diagnosis and treatment of cancer cervix We are aware that people all over the world are organizing such programmes in different ways in their own regions We have decided to observe a day as world cancer cervix eradication day during which we will try to co ordinate the activities of similar workers and organizations with an aim to eradicate cancer cervix from our globe The break through discovery HPV infection causes cancer cervix for which the Nobel prize for physiology or medicine was awarded in 2008 to Dr Harald zur Hausen and subsequent availability of vaccine against HPV infection has encouraged us to think in the direction of cancer cervix eradication We therefore thought that the birthday of Dr Harald zur Hausen on 11th March would be the most appropriate day to observe World Cancer Cervix Eradication Day On this day we will audit all our activities till date and will endeavour to coordinate activities of others in this field to create awareness for eradicating cancer cervix Since 2011 we are observing World Cancer Cervix Eradication Day at Cuttack This year we are going to organise the 13th World Cancer Cervix Eradication Day on 11th March 2023 at AHPGIC Cuttack Hearings, Reports and Prints of the Senate Committee on Aeronautical and Space Sciences United States.
