

Checking the V belt

The belt which drives the generator and the fan should be checked at regular intervals for tension and wear. When pressed with the thumb it should yield approximately 1.5 cm. (1") and should not show signs of excessive wear.

To adjust the belt, remove the rear half of the pulley on the generator. When loosening and tightening the nut, insert a screwdriver in the slot in the front half of the pulley and support it against the upper bearing cover on the generator. To replace the belt, the cover plate for the crankshaft pulley must also be taken off after removing the timing screws.

The belt is tensioned by increasing or decreasing the number of washers between the pulley halves. Taking washers out increases the tension and putting them in decreases it. New belts stretch slightly at first and must be checked after 500 kms (300 miles) and the tension corrected. The fan can also be changed any place after this as it is not really very hard to adjust the belt again. To test the belt too tight is just as bad as being it too loose.

Even though the belt normally has a long service life, it is advisable to check every 4 years.

Checking air cleaner

The oil bath air cleaner should be checked every 10,000 kms (6,000 miles).

all the dust present in the air drawn in by the engine is retained by the filter insert in the upper part of the air cleaner and washed out when the vehicle is in motion by the oil in the lower part of the cleaner. In time, this causes a layer of sludge to form at the bottom of the lower part. If the cleaner-check reveals that there is only 5-15 mm (1.5-2") of oil above the sludge layer, the lower part should be carefully cleaned and filled with fresh oil. The top part does not need cleaning, however, if the filter insert has become so dirty due to delayed cleaning or oil shortage that the air inlet holes on the underside are partly blocked, the accumulated dirt should be removed, preferably with a small piece of wood.

A dirty filter insert not only reduces the engine output, it can also cause premature wear in the engine. If the local conditions are such that the vehicle is frequently driven over very dusty roads it is advisable to clean the air cleaner more often.

The warm air control flap should be checked each time for freedom of movement. This flap regulates the flow of preheated air to the carburetor in proportion with the speed of the engine.

Servicing air cleaner

Full washers (washer base off air cleaner)

Full preheaters (base off air cleaner) inside above.

Loosen four quick-release clips and take inside part off lower part of cleaner.

Take upper part out. The upper part must never be laid down with the filter insert upwards.

Loosen two clips and take lower part of cleaner out.

Clean the lower part thoroughly and fill to the mark with fresh SAE 20 engine oil.
