

1-2 DESCRIPTION AND OPERATION

Series Covered

All Bombardier Sea-Doo personal watercraft are covered in this manual, from the early model years thru 1991.

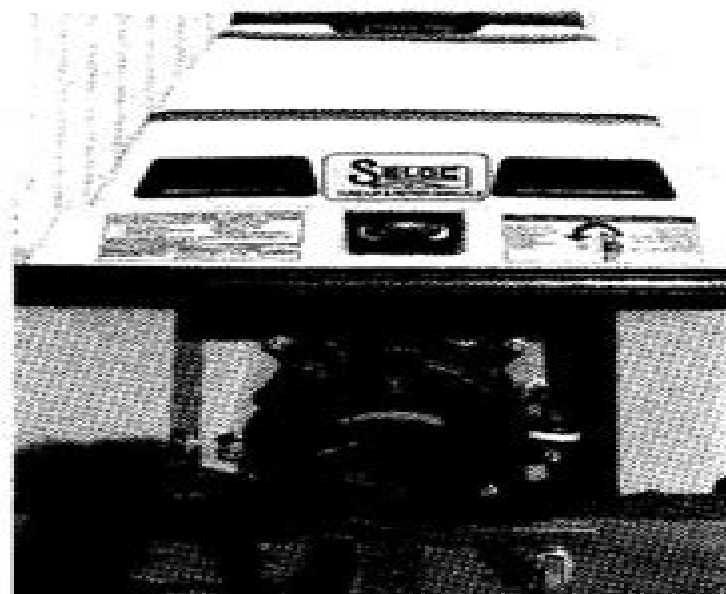

A 580cc rotary valve engine and an axial jet pump are used on all Sea-Doo watercraft.

Other Seloc Personal Watercraft Manuals

This manual is the second in a series of three volumes produced in 1991 covering personal watercraft. Volume I covers the Kawasaki models and Volume III covers all Yamaha personal watercraft and other craft powered with a Cuyuna engine.

1-2 PRINCIPLES OF OPERATION

One of the first lessons to be learned in any elementary physics class is Newton's basic law: "for every force, there is an opposite and equal force". This statement is the basic principle of the jet pump. Water is "sucked" and "scooped" in from under Several decals may be affixed to the stern of the hull to indicate compliance with, or exceptions granted to normal coast guard regulations.

the craft by a powerful pump rotating at incredible speed, and then discharged, "blown" out, sternward in the opposite direction. In this manner the watercraft is propelled forward.

The personal watercraft covered in this manual are equipped with either a single or twin cylinder water-cooled two-stroke engine, matched with a single stage (one impeller) jet pump. The Sea-Doo GT is equipped with a "gate" which can be lowered down over the pump outlet nozzle forcing the exhausted water back in a forward direction, thus moving the craft sternward. Personal watercraft jet pumps may be classified as "axial flow" or "mixed flow".

All Sea-Doo Personal Watercraft are equipped with an axial flow jet pump.

Axial Flow

Water in an axial pump moves on a single axis, as depicted in the adjacent illustration, thus the word "axial". In simple terms, water is ingested and discharged parallel to the axis of impeller rotation. The inside of an axial pump case is parallel to the water flow -- unlike the inside of a mixed flow pump.

EDUCATIONAL INFORMATION

Even though Bombardier Sea-Doo personal watercraft utilize only an axial flow pump, the following paragraphs are included in this chapter to acquaint the reader with a mixed flow pump -- how it differs from the axial flow pump and why.

Mixed Flow

Many experts consider the mixed flow system to be the most efficient for personal watercraft application. The water flow is discharged at an inclined angle to the axis of impeller rotation, as indicated by the arrows in the accompanying illustration. The impeller blades are inclined in such a manner to cause the water to be thrown off at a 45 degree angle to the impeller shaft within the pump case. From the pump case, the water is then forced out through the outlet nozzle and steering nozzle. The vanes in the pump case help straighten the water flow through the nozzle.
