

These observations have considerable practical consequences, and, if taken seriously, the significant finding is that a system that encompasses a lot of variables is not as good as a system that encompasses a few. In fact, the system that encompasses a few variables is the best. This is a very important finding, and it is one that should be taken into account when designing a system. It is a finding that is very important, and it is one that should be taken into account when designing a system.
