of its people are at risk from the consequences of rising consumption. Products ranging from cars to hamburgers offer conveniences and pleasures but as Peter Dauvergne makes clear, global political and economic processes displace the real costs of consumer goods into distant ecosystems, communities, and timelines, tipping into crisis people and places without the power to resist. In The Shadows of Consumption, Peter Dauvergne maps the costs of consumption that remain hidden in the shadows cast by globalized corporations. Trade and finance, Dauvergne traces the environmental consequences of five commodities: automobiles, gasoline, refrigerators, beef, and harp seals. In these fascinating histories, we learn, for example, that American officials ignored warnings about the dangers of lead in gasoline in the 1920s; why China is now a leading producer of CFC-free refrigerators; and how activists were able to stop Canada's commercial seal hunt in the 1980s but are unable to do so now. Dauvergne's innovative analysis allows us to see why so many efforts to manage the global environment are failing, even as environmentalism is slowly strengthening. He proposes a guiding principle of balanced consumption for both consumers and corporations. We know that we can make things better by driving a high-mileage car, eating locally grown food, and buying energy-efficient appliances, but these improvements are incremental, local, and insufficient. More crucial than our individual efforts to reuse and recycle will be reforms in the global political economy to reduce the inequalities of consumption and correct the imbalance between growing economies and environmental sustainability.

Driving from Japan Wanda James, 2015-08-13. This study chronicles the success of the Japanese car in America. Starting with Japan's first gasoline-powered car, the Takuri, it examines early Japanese inventors and automotive conditions in Japan, the arrival of Japanese cars in California in the late 1950s, consumer and media reactions to Japanese manufacturers, what obstacles they faced, initial sales, and how the cars gained popularity through shrewd marketing. Toyota, Honda, Datsun, Nissan, Mazda, Subaru, Isuzu, and Mitsubishi are profiled individually from their origins through the present. An examination follows of the forced cooperation between American and Japanese manufacturers, the present state of the industry in America, and the possible future of this union, most importantly in the race for a more environmentally sound vehicle.
