China: Tackle the Challenge of Global Climate Change Angang Hu, Qingyou Guan, 2017-05-18 Global climate change is one of the challenges ever to confront humanity with the largest scale widest scope and most far reaching influence As the biggest developing country with the largest population China is the world's leading consumer of coal and energy and one of the worst hit victims of global warming Consequently China should assume its responsibility in making contributions to global sustainable development

Based on the principles of fairness and efficiency this study creatively puts forward two principles of global governance on climate change. The first entails replacement of the two group schema of developed and developing countries with a four group model based on the Human Development Index (HDI). The second entails application of the resulting model to specify the major emitters as principal contributors to emission reduction. In addition, it proposes a two step strategy for China to tackle the issue of climate change. This book makes it clear that China should proactively engage in relevant international cooperation, actively participate in international climate negotiations, make clear commitments to reduce emissions and assume the obligations of a responsible power to achieve sustainable and green development.

Climate Change 1995: Economic and Social Dimensions of Climate Change Hoesong Yi, Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change. Working Group III., 1996-06-27. The consequences of climate change for society are analysed in this landmark assessment from the IPCC. This book assesses the available knowledge on the many issues that society has to face, including the international decision making framework, applicability to climate change of techniques for assessing costs and benefits, the significant social costs of projected climate change and the economic assessment of policy instruments to combat climate change nationally and internationally. Some important conclusions of this Second Assessment Report indicate that 10 to 30% of greenhouse gas emissions in most countries can be reduced at negative or zero cost, no regrets measures. Also, the literature indicates that climate change will cause aggregate net damage, which provides an economic rationale for going beyond no regrets measures. It also indicates that a portfolio of mitigation, adaptation and research measures is a sound strategy for addressing climate change given the remaining uncertainties. This report speaks directly to the issues that are faced by the many countries committed to limit emissions of greenhouse gases by the year 2000 and currently negotiating actions to be taken beyond that date. It will be of great value to the international community of policymakers interested in the consequences of climate change as well as to economists, social and natural scientists.
