

Study Guide Ch 24: Intro. to Animals, Sponges & Cnidarians

Section 24-1 and 24-2: Introduction to the Animal Kingdom: Section Review

With these sections you began your study of the animal kingdom. You learned that animals could be classified as vertebrates or _____, depending on whether or not they have a _____. Between 90-95% of all animals are _____. Many invertebrates support their body with _____ - stiff structures found on the OUTSIDE of their bodies. Conversely, a vertebrate has to have both a _____ and _____ to be classified as a vertebrate.

You discovered that an important characteristic of animals is cell specialization and division of labour. It is this division of labour that enable an animal to perform the basic functions that are essential to its survival. These functions include feeding, _____, internal transport, _____ of waste products, response to environmental conditions, movement, and _____. Levels of organization in the body become higher as animals become more complex in form. The essential functions of the least complex animals (the _____) are carried out on the _____ level of organization. Cnidarians exhibit a more evolved _____ level of organization since their cells have organized themselves into tissues, but no _____ are present. As you move on to more complex animals, you will observe a steady increase in the number of specialized _____. You will also see those tissues joining together to form more and more specialized _____ or organ systems. In the last part of this section you learned about trends in animal evolution. You discovered that some of the simplest animals exhibit _____ symmetry, whereas most complex animals are characterized by a concentration of sense organs and nerve cells in their head region, called _____.

Formulating a Definition: Building Vocabulary Skills. Use the five terms listed below to write your own definition of the word animal. You may use one sentence or several sentences. (Do not copy the definition of an animal from your textbook!)

Eukaryotic multi-cellular cell walls Heterotroph cells

YOUR Definitions: _____

Rating concepts: Understanding the Main Ideas. The seven essential life functions of an animal are listed below. Each of the statements that follow refers to one of these functions. In the blank before each statement, write the life function to which the statement refers. You may use some functions more than once.

Feeding respiration internal transport movement
 Excretion response reproduction

- _____ 1. A pumping organ called a heart forces a fluid called blood through a series of blood vessels.
- _____ 2. In some species, eggs hatch into larvae, which later undergo a process called metamorphosis.
- _____ 3. Sense organs, such as eyes and ears, gather information from the environment.

Pediatric Critical Care Study Guide Steven E. Lucking, Frank A. Maffei, Robert F. Tamburro, Neal J.

Thomas, 2012-04-10 This is the first comprehensive study guide covering all aspects of pediatric critical care medicine. It fills a void that exists in learning resources currently available to pediatric critical care practitioners. The major textbooks are excellent references but do not allow concise reading on specific topics and are not intended to act as both text and study guide. There are also several handbooks available but these are usually written for general pediatric residents and lack the advanced physiology and pathophysiology required for the higher level pediatric critical care practitioner.
