ABSTRACT: Codveloped by the American Heart Association and the American Red Cross, these guidelines represent the first comprehensive update of first aid treatment recommendations since 2010. Incorporating the results of structured evidence reviews from the International Liaison Committee on Resuscitation, these guidelines cover first aid treatment for critical and common medical, traumatic, environmental, and toxicological conditions. This update emphasizes the continuous evolution of evidence evaluation and the necessity of adapting educational strategies to local needs and diverse community demographics. Existing guidelines remain relevant unless specifically updated in this publication. Key topics that are new, are substantially revised, or have significant new literature include opioid overdose, bleeding control, open chest wounds, spinal motion restriction, hypothermia, frostbite, presyncope, anaphylaxis, snakebite, oxygen administration, and the use of pulse oximetry in first aid, with the inclusion of pediatric-specific guidance as warranted.

Key Words: AHA Scientific Statements ■ American Heart Association ■ emergencies ■ first aid ■ Red Cross ■ wounds and injuries

TOP 10 TAKE-HOME MESSAGES FOR FIRST AID

1. General care and safety: The first aid provider should provide care within their skill and knowledge set, seeking further medical care as needed, and be mindful of their own safety.
2. First aid for bleeding: When faced with life-threatening bleeding, the first aid provider should apply direct pressure followed by application of a tourniquet or wound packing if the location of the wound is amenable.
3. First aid for chest pain: In adults with acute chest pain, it is recommended that emergency medical services be activated to initiate transport to the closest emergency department. While awaiting the arrival of emergency medical services, first aid providers may encourage alert adults experiencing nontraumatic chest pain to chew and swallow aspirin (162–325 mg) unless the person experiencing pain has a known aspirin allergy or has been advised by a health care professional not to take aspirin.
4. First aid for stroke: The use of a stroke recognition scale such as Face, Arms, Speech, Time is recommended to aid in the recognition of acute stroke in adults and may also be used as an adjunct in pediatrics, although it is not validated in that setting and should not solely be used to identify the broad presentation of stroke in children.
5. First aid for opioid overdose: A first aid provider who encounters a person with suspected opioid overdose who is unresponsive and not breathing normally should activate the emergency response system, provide high-quality cardiopulmonary resuscitation (compressions plus ventilation), and administer naloxone.
