Carrier,Daniel Miller,2020-08-25 We live in a time of economic virtualism whereby our lives are made to conform to the virtual reality of economic thought Globalization transnational capitalism structural adjustment programmes and the decay of welfare are all signs of the growing power of economics one of the most potent forces of recent decades In the last thirty years economics has ceased to be just an academic discipline concerned with the study of economy and has come to be the only legitimate way to think about all aspects of society and how we order our lives Economic models are no longer measured against the world they seek to describe but instead the world is measured against them found wanting and made to conform This profound and dangerous change in the power of abstract economics to shape the lives of people in rich and poor countries alike is the subject of this interdisciplinary study Contributors show how economics has come to portray a virtual reality a world that seems real but is merely a reflection of a neo classical model and how governments the World Bank and the IMF combine to stamp the world with a virtual image that condemns as irrational our local social and cultural arrangements Further it is argued that virtualism represents the worrying emergence of new forms of abstraction in the political economy of which economics is just one example The Media Student's Book Gill Branston,Roy Stafford,2010-05-28 The Media

Cultural Studies and Environmentalism Deborah J. Tippins, Michael P. Mueller, Michiel van Eijck, Jennifer D Adams, 2010-08-05. As the first book to explore the confluence of three emerging yet critical fields of study, this work sets an exacting standard. The editors' aim was to produce the most authoritative guide for ecojustice, place-based education and indigenous knowledge in education. Aimed at a wide audience that includes but is not restricted to science educators and policymakers, Cultural Studies and Environmentalism starts from the premise that schooling is a small part of the larger educational domain in which we live and learn. Informed by this overarching notion, the book opens up ways in which home-grown talents, narratives and knowledge can be developed and eco-region awareness and global relationships can be facilitated. Incorporating a diversity of perspectives that include photography, poetry and visual art, the work provides a nuanced lens for evaluating educational problems and community conditions while protecting and conserving the most threatened and vulnerable narratives. Editors and contributors share the view that the impending loss of these narratives should be discussed much more widely than is currently the case and that both teachers and children can take on some of the responsibility for their preservation. The relevance of ecojustice to this process is clear. Ecojustice philosophy is a way of learning about how we frame or perceive the world around us and why that matters. Although it is not synonymous with social or environmental justice, the priorities of ecojustice span the globe in the same way. It incorporates a deep recognition of the appropriateness and significance of learning from place-based experiences and indigenous knowledge systems rather than depending on some urgent ecological crises to advocate for school and societal change. With a multiplicity of diverse voices coming together to explore its key themes, this book is an important starting point for educators in many arenas. It brings into better focus a vital role for the Earth's ecosystems in the context of ecosociocultural theory and participatory democracy alike. Encompassing theoretical, empirical, and experiential standpoints concerning place-based knowledge systems, this unique book argues for a transformation of science education's intellectual tradition of thinking that emphasizes individual cognition. In its place, the book offers a wisdom tradition of thinking living and being that emphasizes community survival in harmony within itself and with Mother Earth. Glen Aikenhead
