

Jeep Grand Cherokee is by far the most technologically advanced vehicle Jeep has ever built. This technology is evident not only in standard features like Jeep Quadra-Coil suspension, standard driver's side air bag, and four-wheel anti-lock brake system, but also in how Grand Cherokee is designed and constructed.

Grand Cherokee's aerodynamic design includes flush-mounted glass, rounded front and rear bumper fascias, integral fender flares, wraparound headlamps, and a steeply raked windshield for a drag coefficient rating of 0.42.

Extensive sound-deadening materials applied to floor, door, and quarter panel areas reduce engine and road noise in the cabin area. Thick front side window glass adds to the quiet interior while microcellular urethane suspension joints help minimize the disturbance caused by driving over large objects or potholes.

1 The Vehicle Information Center (VIC) monitors operating systems and utilizes a multi-color graphic display screen to direct the driver's attention to items such as "oil-change soon" or "engine fault code." It also gives reminders for service and routine maintenance. VIC is standard on Grand Cherokee Limited.

By selecting an alternative urethane primer, Grand Cherokee avoids releasing toxic methylene chloride during the painting process. Instead, the liquid paint sludge from the painting process is transformed into dry, non-hazardous powder for use in other commercial products. The Grand Cherokee also utilizes R-134a air conditioning refrigerant that has been identified as non-hazardous to the ozone layer.

2 Jeep Grand Cherokee has a available with power disc brakes at all four wheels.

3 Quadra-Trac is the most advanced four-wheel-drive system ever devised. This all-terrain system reacts automatically in all weather conditions, even icy driving surfaces. Its control system differentially adjusts each axle's torque without shifting from 4-wheel drive to 4-wheel drive. It's a "lock-up" system differential, depending on the traction required. A shift to low range provides optimum gearing and torque at low speeds.

4 Jeep ABS positions electromagnetic speed sensors at all four wheels to detect potential lock-up. During a sudden stop, the sensor sends deceleration rate information to an electronic control unit (ECU). The ECU is able to adjust the dose, magnitude, timing, lockup, and speed of the brake modulation. This modulates to firm retards/brake fluid pressure, thereby preventing lock-up at the affected wheels.

5 The front and rear bumpers are constructed of 15% of energy-absorbing polycarbonate to help protect the body from more damage and bear the brunt of debris from car and off-road.

7 The high-output 4.0-liter 24-valve engine design includes dual overhead camshafts, separate multi-point fuel injection, large throttle body design, large diameter cast-iron block, hydraulic roller lifters, rocker-arms for three overhead valves, overhead camshaft, and main shaft bearings.

At each corner, Grand Cherokee's Quadra-Coil suspension includes high-torque coil springs, dual locating arms, and high-capacity deflected-tube gas-charged shock absorbers.
