

Fig. 10 Approved lower unit lubricant. To protect the investment made in the outboard purchase, only the very best gear oils should be used. The correct oil can be worth the increased expense many times over.

Fig. 11 The lower unit is fitted through the oil plug and allowed to rise through the case for the oil level plug. This is done to allow any trapped air to escape.

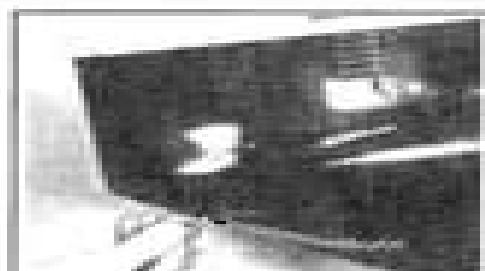

Fig. 12 Most drive plugs are impregnable to trap any water floating around in the oil. Some amount of water is considered normal water to be tolerated but if there are signs of metal chips or excessive metal particles, the gear case needs to be disassembled and inspected.

Fuel Filter

• See Figure 13

The fuel filter is designed to keep particles of dirt and debris from entering the carburetor and clogging the internal passages. A great supply of dirt or water can drastically affect the ability of the carburetor to deliver the proper amount of air and fuel to enter the engine. If a filter becomes clogged, the flow of gasoline will be reduced. This means more fuel will consume, less power and stalling and idle problems.

Regular maintenance of the fuel filter will decrease the risk of breaking the flow of fuel to the engine, which could leave you stranded on the water. Fuel filters are easy to inspect and replacement is a simple task. Change your fuel filter on a regular basis to avoid fuel system problems in the carburetor.

In addition to the fuel filter mounted on the engine, a filter is usually found inside or near the fuel tank. Because of the large variety of differences in both portable and fixed fuel tanks, it is impossible to give a detailed procedure for removal and installation. Most in-tank filters are simply a screen on the pump-out line inside the fuel tank. Filters of this type usually only need to be cleaned and returned for service. Fuel filters on the outside of the tank are typically of the inline type and are replaced by simply removing the clamps, disconnecting the hoses and installing a new filter. When installing the new filter, make sure the arrow on the filter points in the direction of fuel flow.

RELIEVING FUEL SYSTEM PRESSURE

• See Figure 14

On fuel injected engines, always relieve system pressure prior to disconnecting any fuel system component, fitting or fuel line.

CAUTION

Exercise extreme caution whenever relieving fuel system pressure to avoid fuel spray and potential serious bodily injury. Please be advised that fuel under pressure may penetrate the skin on any part of the body it contacts.

To avoid the possibility of fire and personal injury, never disconnect the negative battery cable.

Always wear a shop towel or cloth around the fitting or connection prior to relieving to absorb any excess fuel due to leakage. Remove fuel oil fuel leakage is removed from engine surfaces. Ensure that all fuel under pressure or leaks is fully and safely disposed.

1. Remove the plastic cap over the pressure port located outside of the bottom of the engine housing.
2. If a screwdriver is used to depress the ballcock valve and release the pressure in the system and allow the fuel to drain from the valve.
3. Place the screwdriver lightly over the valve tip and wrap a clean shop towel around the valve and screwdriver. This operation is critical to relieving air fuel if a fire occurs.

Fig. 14 Fuel pressure can be depressurized at the pressure port valve. Always use extreme caution while working around fuel under pressure.
