

Worksheet: Active Transport

Active transport uses energy (ATP) to move solutes against their gradients. Substances are moved against their concentration gradient – that is, from the side where they are less concentrated to the side where they are more concentrated. This type of transport requires energy, usually in the form of ATP. A common example of active transport is the sodium-potassium pump. This transmembrane protein pumps sodium out of the cell and potassium into the cell. The sodium-potassium pump is necessary for proper nerve transmission and is a major energy consumer in the body. The inside of the cell is negatively charged compared with outside of the cell. The difference in electric charge across a membrane is expressed in voltage and termed the membrane potential. Because the inside of the cell is negatively charged, a positively charged ion on the outside, like sodium, is attracted to the negative charges inside the cell. Thus, two forces drive the diffusion of ions across a membrane:

- A chemical force, which is the ion's concentration gradient, and
- A voltage gradient across the membrane, which attracts positively charged ions and repels negatively charged ions

This combination of forces acting on an ion forms an electrochemical gradient.

Endocytosis and Exocytosis:

There are two types of bulk transport, exocytosis and endocytosis, and both require the expenditure of energy (ATP). In endocytosis, molecules that are too large to be transported by other means are engulfed by an invagination of the cell membrane and carried into the cell surrounded by a vesicle.

There are three forms of endocytosis:

- Pinocytosis is a form of endocytosis in which the cell engulfs fluids (liquids).
- Phagocytosis is a form of endocytosis in which the cell takes in larger particles, such as a white blood cell engulfing a bacterium.
- Receptor-mediated endocytosis allows the cell to take in very specific molecules (ligands) that pair up with specific receptors on the cell surface.

Exocytosis is the reverse of endocytosis. Exocytosis is a form of active transport in which a cell transports molecules (such as proteins) out of the cell (exo- + cytosis) by expelling them in an energy-using process.
