Antihypertensive Drugs	Chapter 22

1. What should we consider when treating a pregnant hypertensive client with medication? Drug transfer to fetus through placenta: ACE/ARBs are Category D during 2nd/3rd trimester. Commonly use methyldopa (Aldomet) as first choice; other classes may be used.
2. What medication(s) would be considered first line? Methyldopa commonly first line in pregnancy for HTN
What medication(s) would be contraindicated? ACE & ARBS are Cat D in 2nd/3rd trimester
3. List nursing considerations for hypertension treatment in the elderly? Start low; go slow!! Check for drug interactions, due to elderly taking more medications (i.e. Polypharmacy risk!!). They may not tolerate drugs as well, given age and underlying medical conditions. Counsel on increased risk for potential for orthostatic hypotension and increased risk possible falls: Frequently monitor vital signs, especially blood pressure and pulse rate, when the patient is taking any of the adrenergic drugs because of their cardiovascular and cerebrovascular effects. Use of Beta-Adrenergic Agonists in Elderly (Beta-Blockers).....(IMPORTANT!!!)
Baroreceptors do not work as effectively in the elderly patient. Reduced baroreceptor activity may lead to orthostatic hypotension, and increase risk of falls, especially when blood pressure medications are taken, including Beta Blockers. Teach client about these potential effects and safety measures to avoid falls.
 - Several physiologic changes occur in the cardiovascular system of the older adult, including a decline in the efficiency and contractile ability of the heart muscle, decrease in cardiac output, and diminished stroke volume. Stress, heat, and use of beta-adrenergic agonists may lead to significant increases in blood pressure and pulse rate.
 - Advise patients that any occurrence of chest pain, palpitations, headache, or seizures must be reported immediately to the prescriber and/or emergency care accessed.
 - Caution patients about the use of over-the-counter drugs, herbs, supplements, and other medications. This caution is due to possible drug-drug interactions as well as the elderly person's increased sensitivity to many drugs and other chemicals. (Lilley 303)

Briefly describe how each drug class generally works: The sampling of drugs we will be focusing on are listed below.

Drug class	Brief: Mechanism of Action
Central Acting Alpha2Adrenergic (Clonidine & Methyldopa)	Decrease SNS outflow from the brain: decrease the action of "fight or fright", which actually starts in the brain when it recognizes danger or senses fear
Alpha blockers-peripheral acting (Prazosin, Doxazosin)	Block alpha receptors in the blood vessels= vasodilation: more chance for orthostatic hypotension due to the alpha blockade.
Beta Blockers- (Atenolol; Labetolol; Metoprolol)	Block beta receptors in the heart- decrease heart rate and contractility; also, block renin release (a vasoconstrictor) from the kidneys
Dual-Action Alpha1 & Beta receptor blocker (carvedilol; labetalol)	Blocks beta and alpha receptor (as above): more chance for orthostatic hypotension due to the alpha blockade, especially in the elderly.
Angiotensin-converting enzyme Inhibitors (ACE Inhibitors) (Lisinopril)	Inhibit the angiotensin converting enzyme, so that A1 doesn't convert to A2; A2 is a vasoconstrictor and also stimulates release of Aldosterone, which causes Na+/H2O retention. SO, THESE ACTIONS ARE BLOCKED.
Angiotensin II (A2)receptor blockers (ARBs) (Losarten)	These drugs block Angiotensin 2 from activating cell receptor sites: A2 is a vasoconstrictor and also activates Aldosterone, which causes Na+/H2O retention (overall effect is similar to ACE)
Calcium channel blockers (Amlodipine, Diltiazem, Procardia)	Block the influx of calcium needed for smooth muscle contraction; thus you get smooth muscle relaxation & decrease in BP; they also act on the depolarization for cardiac conduction, so they help with SVT/atrial dysrhythmias like Atrial Fibrillation/A flutter
Vasodilators	Direct vasodilate the blood vessels= decreased blood pressure; more risk of orthostasis.
Diuretics	(Review Chapter 28)
