

Respiratory System Lab Activities

Lab 1: Build-A-Lung

Your lungs are so important, but they are often given more credit than they deserve. Your lungs are responsible for the exchange of gas between the atmosphere and the blood, or external respiration. Your lungs are NOT responsible for inflating and deflating themselves, though! Beneath your lungs sits a sheet of muscle known as the diaphragm. Like all muscles, this skeletal muscle sheet contracts and relaxes. When the diaphragm contracts, it pulls down towards the abdominal cavity, making the thoracic cavity larger. A larger space means less pressure and more room for your lungs! This decrease in pressure causes your lungs to inhale. When the diaphragm relaxes, it pushes up into the thoracic cavity, making it smaller. This increase in pressure on your lungs forces them to exhale.

Using the reading above, fill out the following chart on the action of the diaphragm.

Diaphragm Action	Contract	Relax
Does the diaphragm move up or down?	down	up
Does this make the thoracic cavity larger or smaller?	larger	smaller
Does this increase or decrease pressure on the lungs?	decrease	increase
Does it cause the lungs to inhale or exhale?	inhale	exhale

In this portion of the lab, you are going to build a model of the diaphragm and lungs. Your teacher should have provided you with the following resources:

- Plastic 16 oz bottle with no lid and the bottom cut off
- Two balloons

How to build a lung:

Step 1: Take one of the balloons and cut the neck off right as it starts to widen into the main part of the balloon.

Systems Biology Approaches to Understanding the Cause and Treatment of Heart, Lung, Blood, and Sleep Disorders Raimond L Winslow, Jennie Larkin, Pankaj Qasba, 2014-11-21 Development of powerful new high throughput technologies for probing the transcriptome proteome and metabolome is driving the rapid acquisition of information on the function of molecular systems The importance of these achievements cannot be understated they have transformed the nature of both biology and medicine

Despite this dramatic progress one of the greatest challenges that continues to confront modern biology is to understand how behavior at the level of genome proteome and metabolome determines physiological function at the level of cell tissue and organ in both health and disease Because of the inherent complexity of biological systems the development analysis and validation of integrative computational models based directly on experimental data is necessary to achieve this understanding This approach known as systems biology integrates computational and experimental approaches through iterative development of mathematical models and experimental validation and testing The combination of these approaches allows for a mechanistic understanding of the function of complex biological systems in health and their dysfunction in disease The National Heart Lung and Blood Institute NHLBI has recognized the importance of the systems biology approach for understanding normal physiology and perturbations associated with heart lung blood and sleep diseases and disorders In 2006 NHLBI announced the Exploratory Program in Systems Biology followed in 2010 by the NHLBI Systems Biology Collaborations The goal of these programs is to support collaborative teams of investigators in using experimental and computational strategies to integrate the component parts of biological networks and pathways into computational models that are based firmly on and validated using experimental data These validated models are then applied to gain insights into the mechanisms of altered system function in disease to generate novel hypotheses regarding these mechanisms that can be tested experimentally and to then use the results of experiments to refine the models The purpose of this Research Topic is to present the range of innovative new approaches being developed by investigators working in areas of systems biology that couple experimental and modeling studies to understand the cause and possible treatment of heart lung blood and sleep diseases and disorders This Research Topic will be of great interest to the cardiovascular research community as well as to the general community of systems biologists
