1. Identifying the problem
The first step in the process is to identify the problem. This involves understanding the symptoms and the context in which the problem is occurring.
2. Defining the problem
Once the problem has been identified, the next step is to define it. This involves specifying the problem in terms of its scope, its impact, and its causes.
3. Generating hypotheses
The third step is to generate hypotheses. This involves developing a list of possible causes for the problem, based on the information available.
4. Testing the hypotheses
The fourth step is to test the hypotheses. This involves gathering data and conducting experiments to determine which hypothesis is most likely to be correct.
5. Evaluating the results
The final step is to evaluate the results. This involves comparing the results of the tests to the hypotheses and determining which hypothesis is best supported by the evidence.
