

Understanding how Active Directory integration feature works in OpsMgr 2007

Happy New Year!!! One of my colleagues had shared with me some detailed information on how Active Directory (AD) integration works (in particular how the service connection points (SCP) are created) and I thought it would be a good blog post for this week. For those of you who have never heard about AD integration in OpsMgr it is the ability for an OpsMgr agent to query active directory and know which management server it needs to report to. AD integration is useful to those customers that have larger deployment of over a thousand agents and helps reduce manageability costs. By using AD integration you can specify the primary and secondary management server for agents something that cannot be done using push agent where users can only specify the primary management server.
