CELL REPRODUCTIONSection 18-3: Cell Division

Read the passage below, which covers topics from your textbook. Answer the questions that follow.

Interphase is a nonreproductive phase that is divided into four phases: prophase, metaphase, anaphase, and telophase. Prophase is the first phase of mitosis. Prophase begins with the dissolving and breaking up of DNA into small, compact chromosomes that can be seen as thin, thread-like structures. During the 4 phases, each chromosome is copied. The two copies of each chromosome, called sister chromatids, are connected to each another by two structures. At the same time, centrioles and the new form microtubule-forming areas and disappear. Prophase actually gives sister chromatids support when the dissolving begins. The chromosomes start around opposite poles of the cell and spindle fibers pull them from chromosomes to poles of the cell.

Metaphase is the second phase of mitosis. During metaphase, chromosomes move from the chromosome to the center of the dividing cell.

Anaphase is the third phase of mitosis. During anaphase, sister chromatids separate and move to opposite poles of the cell. The chromatids separate, they are connected to be individual chromosomes.

Telophase is the fourth phase of mitosis. During telophase, sister chromatids separate from the cell and spindle fibers disappear. Sister chromatids separate and move to opposite poles of the cell. A nuclear envelope forms around each set of chromosomes, and a nucleolus forms in each of the newly forming cells.

Cells are abundant with the phase of mitosis in the cell. While the cell is nonreproductive, the current phase of the reproductive cell.

18-3-1: Reproductive Cell Division

Reproductive division, the reproductive division stage of the cell cycle, is the process by which a cell divides into two daughter cells.

Skin Models Ronald Marks, Gerd Plewig, 2012-12-06 In the last fifty years dramatic progress has been made in the understanding of skin and skin diseases Although we are still somewhat off understanding the ultimate causes of such disorders as psoriasis atopic dermatitis and the congenital disorder of keratinization we now have considerable information on the physiological disturbances in various diseases This has permitted and encouraged a rational approach to treatment The successful use of antimetabolic agents immunomodulators and retinoids may be cited as examples A major reason for this improvement may be the fact that researchers accept models for the investigation of skin diseases Increasing numbers of them have become available in the past years So many have been described that it is doubtful whether anyone researcher is aware of all the other models described even in his own field of interest This book is a challenge for those involved in the study of skin and its disorders to use the sundry models of skin that have proven helpful It would be impossible for this work to be all embracing but it is hoped that the choice of models offered in this publication will be stimulating and helpful in the solution of knotty skin questions April 1986 Ronald Marks Cardiff Gerd Plewig Düsseldorf
