Silence, Love, and Death Shannon Nichole Craigo-Snell, 2008 One of the central elements of Karl Rahner's theology is the affirmation that God offers salvation to every human being and in so doing empowers each of us to say yes to this holy vocation This divine human dialogue of offer and response is the heart of Rahner s understanding of Christian faith In this book Shannon Craigo Snell explores what it means to say yes to God in Rahner s theology Drawing on a variety of his writings Craigo Snell focuses on three moments in human freedom that Rahner repeatedly points to in describing how we say yes to God silence love and death In Rahner s theology the theme of silence is often used to mark a posture of openness to the mysterious other both human and divine which is a primary characteristic of what it is to be human This openness to the other is concretely realized in love such that human identity is both gift received and task accomplished Further this self possessing openness to the other is fully actualized in an eternal inter communion Rahner s discussions of eschatology do not center on an affirmation of the immortality of the individual soul but rather paint a portrait of communally sanctified humanity that draws us forward into ourselves our community and God Attending to these three ways of saying yes to God generates an understanding of Rahner s theology as neither modern nor postmodern but rather a challenging alternative vision that can be a vital resource for contemporary feminist theologies
