

Ford builds Econoline '75 differently from other vans...with a separate frame for rugged strength.

Econoline '75 is the only American van to have a separate frame and body for superior strength and safety. The separate body is designed to absorb and dissipate energy, and the separate frame is designed to absorb and dissipate energy. Driver and passenger safety. The Econoline's new forward-facing design allows the driver to see the road. They can easily step from their seat into the cargo area - optional Captain's Chairs even come standard.

Improved visibility. The bigger, higher windshield (over 12 sq. ft. sq. with 18% more glass area) provides maximum visibility. You can see traffic lights, signs, roadblocks, and can see back without blind spots.

Up to 17 vehicle service checks are provided by Econoline's new design. Forward-facing design allows service checks to be done without having to enter the passenger compartment. Fuel, power steering pump and fluid reservoir, distributor oil, transmission, compressor, oil dipstick, radiator, battery, windshield wiper, rear-view mirror, master cylinder, among others.

Water and moisture resistance. Water can penetrate the exterior and provides a stream on the interior floor of the van for efficient cleaning action.

Removable engine cover. A compact, fold-in the way engine cover can be easily removed to perform major service functions. Access easily installed engine cover provides for a protected and finished look, and also and change hood bolt right in.

Build state option system. This standard on all Ford Econolines, with state option eliminating the need for parts and components. Each state has its own, the time between installation is extended, and scheduled maintenance is reduced.

Improved rear frame frame suspension. Ford's exclusive Frame Beam suspension has been made more better for the new '75 Econolines. Reduced steering and suspension primarily provide easy handling and maximum stability.

Energy absorbing front frame side rails. Another Econoline exclusive. "Wider" sections of front frame side rails absorb impact from the front.

Power front disc brakes. First standard on all Econolines, power front disc brakes provide 10% greater force, maximum 1000 lb. disc brakes.

Computer selected coil front springs. Computers are used to select the proper springs for each load capacity and a smooth, comfortable ride.

Rubber front fenders. Rubber design allows easy replacement of front fenders. Another example of the convenience given to customers.

18 gallon auxiliary fuel tank. Optional auxiliary fuel tank provides a total fuel capacity of up to 44 gallons.

Front suspended parking brake. For quick, easy entry, hand release.

Hinged or sliding cargo door. Two choices of bigger, bigger side cargo doors for '75, or a large sliding side door - same price.

Front door rear door. New hinged rear door is 10% wider than last year's - a full 14 inches - and provides the convenience of "lean door" opening.

More floor area. Econoline cargo area is increased 12 inches down the middle over last year.

Extensive galvanizing. 36 underlying components subject to corrosion are galvanized. These components include floor components, lower sliding door tracks and vertical outer supports and lower panels. In addition, a 10% protective zinc-rich primer is applied to 22 other body components.

Deep dip Econoline primer. Econoline bodies receive 100% of body immersed in primer. A high voltage charge drives primer to the body and provides a uniform coat of primer to the body.

Sturdy body on frame construction. The rugged backbone of the new Econoline is a full-length, reinforced frame. Steel side rails up to 7 1/2 inches wide provide structural support.

Rubber body mounts. Temporally placed rubber body mounts are designed to secure the body, door and floor from the frame. This kind of isolation is not found on other vans.

Shock absorbers. Double spring shock absorbers - front and rear - are standard on all Econolines. Heavy-duty shocks are standard on 2,300 and optional on others.
