Mullis,Francois Ferre,Richard A.

Gibbs,2012-02-02 James D Watson When in late March of 1953 Francis Crick and I came to write the first Nature paper describing the double helical structure of the DNA molecule Francis had wanted to include a lengthy discussion of the genetic implications of a molecule whose structure we had divined from a minimum of experimental data and on theoretical arguments based on physical principles But I felt that this might be tempting fate given that we had not yet seen the detailed evidence from King's College. Nevertheless we reached a compromise and decided to include a sentence that pointed to the biological significance of the molecule's key feature: the complementary pairing of the bases. It has not escaped our notice Francis wrote that the specific pairing that we have postulated immediately suggests a possible copying mechanism for the genetic material. By May when we were writing the second Nature paper I was more confident that the proposed structure was at the very least substantially correct so that this second paper contains a discussion of molecular self-duplication using templates or molds. We pointed out that as a consequence of base pairing a DNA molecule has two chains that are complementary to each other. Each chain could then act as a template for the formation on itself of a new companion chain so that eventually we shall have two pairs of chains where we only had one before and moreover
