the new generation of service systems Speaking of Art P. Kivy, 2012-12-06 As the title of this book was meant to suggest its subject is the way we talk about and write about works of art or rather one of the ways namely the way we describe works of art for critical purposes Be cause I wished to restrict my subject matter in this way I have made a sharp and no doubt largely artificial distinction between describing and evaluating And I must at the outset guard against a misreading of this distinction to which I have left myself open In distinguishing between evaluative and descriptive aesthetic judgments I am not saying that when I assert X is p where p is a descriptive term like unified or delicate or garish I may not at the same time be evaluating X too and I am not saying that when I make the obviously evaluative assertion X is good I may not be describing X Clearly if I say X is unified I am evaluating X in that unity is a good making feature of works of art and as it is correct in English at least to call an evaluation a description I do not want to suggest that if an assertion is evaluative it cannot be de scriptive although there have been many philosophers who have thought this indeed to be the case Oswaal organisational development By adopting a cross disciplinary and multi paradigmatic perspective the volume seeks not only to identify the opportunities AI presents for enhancing human dignity and creativity at work but also to critically examine the risks of dehumanisation aesthetic homogenisation and ethical displacement In the contemporary discourse on management theory and practice the accelerated integration of AI technologies has initiated profound transformations that challenge the traditional humanistic foundations of organisational life While AI is often perceived primarily through the lens of operational efficiency cost optimisation and decision making enhancement it also raises fundamental questions about the aesthetic ethical and relational dimensions of management In this context the book s critical research problem was formulated in the following manner understanding how AI driven aesthetics influence the humanistic character of management under what conditions AI can serve human centred goals rather than eroding them and what long term consequences AI integration may have for the emotional ethical and aesthetic dimensions of organisational life Addressing these issues is essential for developing management practices that harmonise technological advancement with the humanistic values of autonomy authenticity empathy and aesthetic experience
