Identifying Citizens David Lyon, 2013-05-03 New ID card systems are proliferating around the world. These may use digitized fingerprints or photos, may be contactless using a scanner, and above all may rely on computerized registries of personal information. In this timely new contribution, David Lyon argues that such IDs represent a fresh phase in the long term attempts of modern states to find stable ways of identifying citizens. New ID systems are new because they are high tech. But their newness is also seen crucially in the ways that they contribute to new means of governance. The rise of e-Government and global mobility along with the aftermath of 9/11 and fears of identity theft are propelling the trend towards new ID systems. This is further lubricated by high technology companies seeking lucrative procurements, giving stakes in identification practices to agencies additional to nation states, particularly technical and commercial ones. While the claims made for new IDs focus on security, efficiency and convenience, each proposal is also controversial. Fears of privacy loss, limits to liberty, government control, and even of totalitarian tendencies are expressed by critics. This book takes an historical, comparative and sociological look at citizen identification and new ID cards in particular. It concludes that their widespread use is both likely and without some strong safeguards troublesome, though not necessarily for the reasons most popularly proposed. Arguing that new IDs demand new approaches to identification practices given their potential for undermining trust and contributing to social exclusion, David Lyon provides the clearest overview of this topical area to date. Public Examinations in England 1850-1900 John Roach, 1971-07-02 A detailed historical account of the origins of the modern examination system in England from 1850 to 1900. At the beginning of the nineteenth century, public examinations were almost unknown; yet by its end they were established as the most generally acceptable method of assessment and selection, with many of them having become almost an article of the Victorian faith, though their objectivity and efficacy were already becoming matters of public controversy. The Oxford and Cambridge honours examinations provided a major source for Victorian ideas of open competition and public examinations. It was seen that this model could be applied to a whole range of educational and administrative purposes. The crucial developments came between 1850 and 1870: major landmarks were the Northcote-Trevelyan Report of 1853 on the Civil Service, the foundation of the Oxford and Cambridge Local Examinations of 1857 and 1858, and Gladstone's introduction in 1870 of open competition into the Home Civil Service. JAIR Journal of International Relations Avipsu Halder, Arnab Dasgupta, Ishita Datta Ray, Kalyanasis Bhattacharya, Neelu Khoshla, Salini

Histories of State Surveillance in Europe and Beyond Kees Boersma, Rosamunde van Brakel, Chiara Fonio, Pieter Wagenaar, 2014-05-09 Does the development of new technology cause an increase in the level of surveillance used by central government Is the growth in surveillance merely a reaction to terrorism or a solution to crime control Are there more structural roots for the increase in surveillance This book attempts to find some answers to these questions by examining how governments have increased their use of surveillance technology Focusing on a range of countries in Europe and beyond this book demonstrates how government penetration into private citizens lives was developing years before the war on terrorism It also aims to answer the question of whether central government actually has penetrated ever deeper into the lives of private citizens in various countries inside and outside of Europe and whether citizens are protected against it or have fought back The main focus of the volume is on how surveillance has shaped the relationship between the citizen and the State The contributors and editors of the volume look into the question of how central government came to intrude on citizens private lives from two perspectives identification card systems and surveillance in post authoritarian societies Their aim is to present the heterogeneity of the European historical surveillance past in the hope that this might shed light on current trends Essential reading for criminologists sociologists and political scientists alike this book provides some much needed historical context on a highly topical issue      Global Change and Future Earth Tom Beer,Jianping Li,Keith

Alverson,2018-10-18 Authoritative reviews on the wide ranging ramifications of climate change from an international team of eminent researchers      Our Biometric Future Kelly Gates,2011-01-23 Since the 1960s a significant effort has been underway to program computers to see the human face to develop automated systems for identifying faces and distinguishing them from one another commonly known as Facial Recognition Technology While computer scientists are developing FRT in order to design more intelligent and interactive machines businesses and states agencies view the technology as uniquely suited for smart surveillance systems that automate the labor of monitoring in order to increase their efficacy and spread their reach Tracking this technological pursuit Our Biometric Future identifies FRT as a prime example of the failed technocratic approach to governance where new technologies are pursued as shortsighted solutions to complex social problems Culling news stories press releases policy statements PR kits and other materials Kelly Gates provides evidence that instead of providing more security for more people the pursuit of FRT is being driven by the priorities of corporations law enforcement and state security agencies all convinced of the technology s necessity and unhindered by its complicated and potentially destructive social consequences By focusing on the politics of developing and deploying these technologies Our Biometric Future argues not for the inevitability of a particular technological future but for its profound contingency and contestability      Architecture, State Modernism and Cultural Nationalism in the Apartheid Capital Hilton

Judin,2021-04-08 This book is the first comprehensive investigation of the architecture of the apartheid state in the period of rapid economic growth and political repression from 1957 to 1966 when buildings took on an ideological role that was never remote from the increasingly dominant administrative legislative and policing mechanisms of the regime It considers how this process reflected the usurpation of a regional modernism and looks to contribute to wider discourses on international postwar modernism in architecture Buildings in Pretoria that came to embody ambitions of the apartheid state for industrialisation and progress serve as case studies These were widely acclaimed projects that embodied for apartheid officials the pursuit of modernisation but carried latent apprehensions of Afrikaners about their growing economic prospects and cultural estrangement in Africa It is a less known and marginal story due to the dearth of material and documents buried in archives and untranslated documents Many of the documents drawings and photographs in the book are unpublished and include classified material and photographs from the National Nuclear Research Centre negatives of 1960s from Pretoria News and documents and pamphlets from Afrikaner Broederbond archives State architecture became the most iconic public manifestation of an evolving expression of white cultural identity as a new generation of architects in Pretoria took up the challenge of finding form to their prospects and beliefs It was an opportunistic faith in Afrikaners who urgently needed to entrench their vulnerable and contested position on the African continent The shift from provincial town to apartheid capital was swift and relentless Little was left to stand in the way of the ambitions and aim of the state as people were uprooted and forcibly relocated structures torn down and block upon block of administration towers and slabs erected across Pretoria This book will be of great interest to students and scholars of architectural history as well as those with an interest in postcolonial studies political science and social anthropology
