

INFORMATIONAL WRITING READY GEN LESSON 10: Module B Grade 5

Topic: Informational Writing

Essential Question: How can we write an effective conclusion by using transitional phrases?

CCSS: W.5.8 Write informative/explanatory texts to examine a topic and convey ideas and information clearly.

	Assessments Used Throughout Lesson	Questions
Materials: draft guide, annotated, Ready Gen Start of the Year Materials (SYMS), A good conclusion sheet, transitional phrases sheet, paper for each student of conclusion paragraph, 3 color highlighters or colored pencils Words: conclusion, transitional phrases	Answers to questioning, file folder responses, independent writing practice
TIME 5-8 minutes	Activities: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> In our last two lessons, we've learned how to write an introduction for our informational article that includes a lead and a focus statement. Now we are ready to complete the entire article by writing the last paragraph, called the conclusion. The purpose, or reason, for writing a conclusion is for the author to wrap up, remind their readers of the important ideas—or main ideas—in their article and to leave the reader thinking. 	Why do you think a conclusion is necessary in an article?
10-15 minutes	File: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Display prepared sheet of the 3 important reminders to include in a good conclusion. Review transitional phrases with students. Say: I know that you practiced transitional phrases when we did our narrative writing. Transitional phrases are very important for writers to use. They help to and our readers connect the ideas in the paragraphs that we write. They help to understand how all the parts of our writing fit together. Display transitional phrases sheet. Say: Last night, I wrote a conclusion to our gym article using these three reminders. (Read aloud conclusion) As you can see, no matter what equipment you have or how the gym is used, or what activity you're playing, you're sure to see kids having fun and cheering in the gym. These three words focus how kids playing on them for years and I hope it will for years to come. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Say: Now I want to see if you can find these 3 points in my conclusion. Hand out copies of conclusion. 	How can these three reminders help us create really good conclusions? Why is it important to use transitional words or phrases? Can you find evidence of the 3 reminders in my conclusion?
15-20 minutes	File also: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Students will highlight or underline using specified colors each of the 3 parts of a good conclusion. For example: yellow-translational, pink-repeat all 3 main points, blue-ending statement On your each one with lines to use if/cause again. Depending on level of your class, you can either stop here or continue with guided practice. Say: It's time for you to write your own conclusion. First independent work Have students locate the 3 main ideas. Say: The first thing we do is write a sentence (Put up sheet for three main ideas) Second independent work Say: Look at our list of transitions and choose one that sounds good in your sentence. Then add it to first sentence to your conclusion. 	How can we create a good topic statement with the 3 main ideas? Why do you think authors include a when or how at the end of an article?
