

Teamwork

Objectives

- To establish a positive classroom community.
- To begin to build a positive rapport that will enable a trusting class-team relationship.

Materials

- Stopwatch.
- A ball that can be easily and safely tossed to students.
- Whiteboard and markers.

Plan

- Stand in the front of the class, but do not say anything. Using a stopwatch, time students to see how long it takes them to listen, be quiet and look at you (no activity, called "Beat the Clock").
- Once you have everyone's full attention, review with students your observations and the time it took them to give you their attention.
- Tell the students, "Today we are going to learn about teamwork."
- Develop with the class a definition for the term teamwork and write responses on the whiteboard.
- The definition should include the kinds of behavior and attitudes that go into effective teamwork (cooperation, working together, planning, listening, practicing together, trying your best, not giving up, helping each other, forgiving, being kind, sportsmanship, respect, support, trust, patience, respect, goal setting.)
- The following questions can be used to help prompt the discussion:
 - What does a team look like?
 - If I couldn't talk, what would I notice about a team?
 - How would I want my teammates to treat me, to help me do my best?
