CAREER EXPLORATION: Writer

What is the job?
A writer can work in many different fields. They may author books, write for newspapers or magazines, edit books that other authors have written, or even write speeches for politicians. They may also write advertisements for businesses, post on social media for companies, and so many more. Another job that is becoming more and more common is blogging. There are many who write lifestyle, informational, fashion, or other types of blogs. They may also write scripts for movies and television shows. There are also those who make a career out of writing songs, poetry, and even things like greeting cards! The possibilities of creativity are nearly endless for those who choose to go into the writing field.

What kind of schooling does it require?
Schooling varies for writers. Many of them, like bloggers, do not even go to school, but they simply write in order to get experience and build a fan base. If one wants to be a newspaper writer or author, they will usually get some sort of college degree. For the most part, these people acquire a bachelor's degree in journalism from a university. They may also get an English, creative writing, or communications degree, which also takes four years. This is a very vast field, so there are many different options.

What does it pay?
Writers make an average of about $55,000 per year. Of course, this varies according to job, experience, and even location. Writers often make much more, but in the beginning, they may make less.

Where are these jobs located?
Writers can be located anywhere. Most cities and towns have newspapers. Also, many writers work online and from home. Those who make more money usually live in larger cities though.
