

Dr. Brewster

Very cordially H. Wood.

How shall my simple verse aspire
Of him to sing whose graced sublimity shines &
Above of whom I feel subjected for the song.
Forthly my Muse her humble strings again
Oh would some favoured scholar of the Nine,
Her Bets power awhile below,
No mistaking should we have some
My verse they give us their world show
Could I but half thy goodness tell,
Long would its cheerful chords intone,
You with soft music would its strings ring sweet -
And gladly they great worth relate.
Now when each place with honours you have filled,
Of which unworshiped men virtues have obtained,
For those three bleed our own best nation's milk,
Our interests to reveal, and have our righteous laws retained
High in the hearts of all your power to lasting train,
You all beloved, while grateful men remain
Oh never will they cease to bless the Noble, good, and true, the brave.
