Human Body Organs

Kidneys

Kidneys are the body's natural filters. They regulate the balance of fluids and waste in the body. They are located in the back of the body, one on each side of the spine. They filter out toxins and excess fluid from the blood, and then excrete them in the form of urine. They also help to regulate blood pressure and produce hormones that control the body's metabolism.

Stomach

Stomach is a muscular organ that is part of the digestive system. It is located in the upper abdomen, just below the diaphragm. It is responsible for breaking down food into smaller pieces that can be absorbed by the body. It also produces stomach acid, which helps to kill bacteria and other harmful organisms that may be present in the food.

Small Intestine

Small intestine is a long, coiled tube that is part of the digestive system. It is located in the lower abdomen, just below the stomach. It is responsible for absorbing nutrients from the food that has been broken down in the stomach. It also produces enzymes that help to break down food into smaller pieces that can be absorbed by the body.

Large Intestine

Large intestine is a long, coiled tube that is part of the digestive system. It is located in the lower abdomen, just below the small intestine. It is responsible for absorbing water and electrolytes from the food that has been broken down in the small intestine. It also produces mucus, which helps to lubricate the passage of stool through the colon.

Heart

Hearth is a muscular organ that is part of the circulatory system. It is located in the center of the chest, between the lungs. It is responsible for pumping blood throughout the body. It has four chambers: two atria and two ventricles. The right side of the heart pumps blood to the lungs, and the left side pumps blood to the rest of the body.

Liver

Liver is a large, reddish-brown organ that is part of the digestive system. It is located in the upper right abdomen, just below the diaphragm. It is responsible for producing bile, which helps to break down fat in the food. It also stores glycogen, which is a form of sugar that can be used for energy. The liver also filters out toxins from the blood and produces proteins that help to regulate the body's metabolism.

Lungs

Lungs are two large, spongy organs that are part of the respiratory system. They are located in the chest, on either side of the heart. They are responsible for taking in oxygen from the air and expelling carbon dioxide from the body. The lungs are covered in a thin layer of moisture, which helps to keep them from drying out. They also have a network of blood vessels that carry oxygenated blood to the rest of the body.

Brain

Brain is a soft, pinkish-grey organ that is part of the nervous system. It is located in the head, protected by the skull and meninges. It is responsible for controlling all of the body's functions, from movement to thought. The brain is made up of billions of neurons, which are specialized cells that can communicate with each other. It also has a complex network of blood vessels that carry oxygenated blood to the rest of the body.

Excavating the Memory Palace Seth Long, 2021-01-04 With the prevalence of smartphones, massive data storage, and search engines, we might think of today as the height of the information age. In reality, every era has faced its own challenges of storing, organizing, and accessing information. While they lacked digital devices, our ancestors, when faced with information overload, utilized some of the same techniques that underlie our modern interfaces: they visualized and spatialized data, tying it to the emotional and sensory spaces of memory, thereby turning their minds into a visual interface for accessing information. In Excavating the Memory Palace, Seth David Long mines the history of Europe's arts of memory to find the origins of today's data visualizations, unearthing how ancient constructions of cognitive pathways paved the way for modern technological interfaces. Looking to techniques like the memory palace, he finds the ways that information has been tied to sensory and visual experience, turning raw data into lucid knowledge. From the icons of smart phone screens to massive network graphs, Long shows us the ancestry of the cyberscape and unveils the history of memory as a creative act.

Engaging the Brain Marcia L. Tate, 2024-08-21 Create unforgettable learning experiences for your students. What can you do when students would rather socialize than pay attention to your lesson? When students appear to lack motivation, how do teachers ensure that learning sticks? How can you best respond to learning loss caused by the pandemic? In this new edition of Marcia Tate's wildly bestselling Worksheets Don't Grow Dendrites, 20 field-tested brain-compatible instructional strategies designed to maximize memory are supported by new classroom applications and research. In each chapter devoted to an individual strategy, you'll discover the latest research on how the brain benefits when the strategy is used. How the strategy engages all students and addresses common behavior problems. Sample classroom activities for various grade levels that teachers can implement immediately. Action plans for incorporating each strategy to accelerate learning. When students actively engage in learning, they stand a much better chance of retaining what we want them to know. As students face setbacks and learning gaps, it's imperative that we quickly
