Focus—The topic is not properly introduced or presented.

Organization—The ideas are not organized in logical sequence and show little relation to each other.

Support—Words and phrases may be vague or inaccurate. The writer shows little or no involvement with the topic and does not address the reader. Sentences are fragmented, incomplete, or choppy.

Conventions—Significant errors in spelling, mechanics, and usage can be found in practically every line, impeding the reader's ability to comprehend what the author attempts to express
