

ADVERSE EVENT REPORT FORM

For the purposes of this form, a serious adverse event is any untoward medical occurrence that results in death, is life-threatening, requires or prolongs hospitalization, causes persistent or significant disability/incapacity, results in congenital anomalies/birth defects, or in the opinion of the investigators represents other significant hazards or potentially serious harm to research subjects or others. A serious adverse event is considered unexpected if it is not described in the Package Insert or in the Investigator's Brochure (for FDA investigational agents), in the protocol, or in the informed consent document.

INSTRUCTIONS:

Please complete the information requested below and forward ___ copies to the IRB as soon as possible, but not later than seven (7) days in the case of death or life-threatening serious adverse events or within fifteen (15) days after the occurrence of all other forms of serious adverse events. The IRB office will immediately forward a copy to the Clinical Director. In addition, continue to follow FDA and the NIH Office reporting requirements if your research involves an IND/IDE or gene transfer.

Clinical Trials Adverse Event FDAnews,2015 Analysis and Use of Adverse Event Report Data and Data Obtained from Investigation and Analysis of Adverse Events for the Purpose of Preventing Reoccurrence of These Events in a Multiple Hospital System Christy L. Bourne,2012 Abstract Since To Err is Human was published in 2000 much has been researched and written about the topic of medical errors or adverse events A key recommendation of that report was the implementation of aggregate reporting systems where data could be compiled and analyzed to provide actionable knowledge about how these events could be prevented There is debate in the literature about the potential effectiveness of such systems in preventing medical errors and adverse events due to inherent challenges in the voluntary reporting of events The purpose of this project was to create such a system in a multi hospital system together with additional strategies to attempt to reduce the number of adverse events Key elements of the project included the system the data the analysis and the feedback Although it is relatively early in the process the project is so far proving to be effective Adverse Event Reporting System (AERS). ,2009 The Adverse Event Reporting System AERS contains over four million reports of adverse events and reflects data from 1969 to the present presented as summary statistics Adverse Drug Events United States. General Accounting Office,2000

Adverse drug events the magnitude of health risk is uncertain because of limited incidence data : report to congressional requesters. , Serious Reportable Adverse Events in Health Care ,2005 Health care errors resulting in patient harm are a leading cause of morbidity and mortality in the United States although there is no national reporting of such occurrences A number of States require reporting of at least some types of these adverse events however it is widely agreed that even where there is required reporting such events are grossly underreported due in part to ambiguity about what is to be reported In 1999 the Institute of Medicine IOM recommended that health care errors and adverse events be reported in a systematic manner The Federal Government s Quality Interagency Coordination Committee concurred with the IOM s recommendation for greater health care error and adverse event reporting and the National Quality Forum NQF was asked to identify a standardized list of preventable serious adverse events that would facilitate reporting of such occurrences This article presents the NQF endorsed consensus list of 27 serious reportable events in health care along with a discussion of the criteria used in selecting the list and various issues related to implementing reporting of these events Since the NQF promulgated this list of serious reportable events in 2002 several States and other entities have enacted legislation or taken administrative action to require reporting of these never events Use of an Electronic Reporting System to
