Mark Monmonier's Adventures in Academic Cartography: A Memoir takes the reader back to the beginning of Monmonier's career in academic cartography at a time of great change. He reflects on his budding interest in maps as a young boy and directs the reader through the swift evolution in academic cartography that took place during his lifetime. Monmonier has only a few years on me, and both having lived through eras of great change during the last century, I can say he has captured its essence. He reveals the choices that changed his life while he steered through and observed changes in the discipline. He relates his own adaptability in cartography and geography, taking us through the pursuit of his career and through the numerous obstacles and unexpected opportunities that his particular background afforded him.

By not adhering to a strict climb through the academic ranks, Monmonier blended his academic work with government contracting and consulting work in the private sector. In turn, this gave him a broader perspective which fueled the development of many new and practical applications in mapmaking. Monmonier takes us from the arduous methods of mid-twentieth century mapmaking to today's digital cartographic manifestations—and everything in-between—and in doing so gives us a dose of history in twentieth-century cartography.

A prolific writer, Monmonier delves into the subjects of his books, gives insight into his writing style and the world of publishing, and provides his take on the levels of success of each of his varied and diverse publications. He brings up the point that the intense research endeavors that culminated in his books also served to revive and transform his teaching. Although he merely inferred that it "informed my teaching," his enthusiasm for each project tells the reader otherwise. Monmonier discusses his contributions to cartographic literature, both academically and for the map-oriented layperson, along with the purpose behind each project. In his discussion of his post-9/11 and post-Hurricane Katrina efforts as part of the Mapping Science Committee (MSC), he injects his own political opinions and observations (here and elsewhere). His work with the MSC produced the federal government report, "Disaster Recovery Begins with a Map," which provides an excellent example of the relevance of new and continued applications of mapping in the real world. After all, how can one truly understand the magnitude of a disaster without its visual representation on a map?

During his career, he has also helped shape the field of academic cartography through his service on various committees and journals. His expertise boosted demand for his consulting work with clients among whom were most notably the US Geographical Survey and the National Geographic Society. Again, his broad approach to writing for an audience larger than academia increased demand for speaking engagements, which he juggled carefully with his continued role in academia.

Mark Monmonier's Adventures in Academic Cartography: A Memoir will appeal to anyone with an interest in cartography, geography, or just maps in general. Monmonier's writing style, which he also discusses in his chapter, "Writing," serves to carry the reader through the lesser thrills of his adventures, such as the blow-by-blow hits and misses of his publishing career, and projects that saw no fruition due to government red tape and budget cuts. Of his many successful projects, the ten-year project as editor of the recently published Cartography in the Twentieth Century (Volume 6 in the series, The History of Cartography), qualifies as a major achievement.

I found his chapter on writing particularly enlightening for those interested in writing and publishing. His advice, similar in my mind to that of Edgar Allen Poe, was to

Adventures In Academic Cartography A Memoir:

Adventures in Academic Cartography Mark Monmonier, 2014-11-30 Adventures in Academic Cartography is a personal memoir offering insight to the diverse impacts of computer technology on the world of cartography and mapping. It surveys the author's half century of work as a scholar, educator and editor as well as his commitment to demystifying for general readers the power of maps as a tool for understanding and persuasion. An overview of his undergraduate and graduate training and early university employment precedes engaging accounts of his experiences as a classroom teacher, academic researcher, book author, journal editor, consultant and editor of Cartography in the Twentieth Century, Volume Six of the monumental History of Cartography. Additional chapters reveal his views on theory, map collecting and writing. This integrated collection of stories promotes an understanding of the many facets of academic cartography which emerged in the twentieth century as a distinct mapping endeavor that touches geographic education, technological innovation, national defense, public policy, professional organizations, libraries, map collections and academic and trade publishing. Mark Monmonier pursued a vigorous career in cartographic scholarship with faculty appointments at the University of Rhode Island, the State University of New York at Albany and Syracuse University where he was appointed associate professor in 1973 and promoted to professor in 1979 and distinguished professor in 1998. Electronic strategies for map design and analysis dominated his research through the mid 1990s. He published the first general textbook on computer aided mapping and made innovative contributions to interactive statistical graphics. An early invention now known as the Monmonier Algorithm became an important research tool for geographic studies in linguistics and genetics. An emerging curiosity about the intersection of mapping and public policy led to Technological Transition in Cartography 1985 and Spying with Maps 2002 and a growing interest in origins inspired focused histories like Air Apparent: How Meteorologists Learned to Map Predict and Dramatize Weather 1999 and Rhumb Lines and Map Wars: A Social History of the Mercator Projection 2004. Recognition includes an Association of American Geographers Media Achievement Award 2000, the American Geographical Society's O. M. Miller Medal 2001 and the German Cartographic Society's Mercator Medal 2009. He continues an active life of scholarship currently focused on patented cartographic inventions.

Martin Woods, 2016-08-01 In 1914 the newspaper map or newsmap began to supply readers with the geographical backdrop to the Great War an important tool in explaining the progress of the war to the public at home Day by day for every campaign and battle readers across the nation were deluged with maps both in the pages of newspapers and pasted up in town and city streets allowing them to follow Australian and Allied exploits Drawn from scant news cables out of date cartography and the writer's imagination a semi fictional war story emerged of ANZAC successes and sometimes disasters Our boys were in Egypt Palestine Gallipoli Belgium Germany and France in towns and villages most Australians had never heard of Soon these places were being discussed with growing expertise over maps in homes pubs churches and clubs Those following the war at home were never allowed too close as censorship rules dictated when maps could be published Yet Where Are Our Boys is not simply about propaganda Maps in newspapers tracked the war's many campaigns and the exploits of our boys but most importantly allowed those at home to feel close to their brothers husbands fathers uncles neighbours and cousins Maps naturally became central to commemorating events people and places The war produced more maps than any time before in history giving us along the way some of the most beautiful and sometimes misleading maps ever published Where Are Our Boys tells the story of how the war was fought and won from the opening salvos in 1914 to Gallipoli and victory on the Western Front In the end though these maps were needed most to help understand the conflict and to comprehend the great human costs travel and locales and the physical space of the children's book as object. In their essays the contributors analyze works from a range of sources and traditions by authors such as Sylvia Plath, Maria Edgeworth, Gloria Anzaldá, Jenny Robson, C. S. Lewis, Elizabeth Knox, and Claude Ponti. While maintaining a focus on how location and spatiality aid in defining the child's relationship to the world, the essays also address themes of borders, displacement, diaspora, exile, fantasy, gender, history, home, leaving, and homecoming, hybridity, mapping, and metatextuality. With an epilogue by Philip Pullman in which he discusses his own relationship to image and locale, this collection is also a valuable resource for understanding the work of this celebrated author of children's literature.

Under the Veil Katherine M. Quinsey, 2012-04-25 For women in early modern Europe the Reformation and the Enlightenment entailed both new freedom and new restrictions. In response to an ideology that immured the female mind and spirit inside the body, women found in religion a hope for individual freedom, a sense of self-identity, and a justification for gender equality. Under the Veil: Feminism and Spirituality in Post-Reformation Europe invokes the veil's dual significance as the marker of the religious woman and as the metaphoric veil separating female interior life from its public construction. This collection of nine essays focuses specifically on the direct links between emergent feminism and religious faith as experienced through wide cultural, geographic, and confessional differences, united by themes of female subjectivity, selfhood, autonomy, and community. The essays range in topic and scope from the early seventeenth to the early nineteenth centuries across Europe, Britain, and North America, through a wide range of experiences and written accounts; its subjects are Philadelphian visionaries and Quaker missionaries, Iroquois leaders and early Canadian nuns, Islamic societies, and European female travellers, French mystics and educators, and British writers and intellectuals. These accounts reveal how women across a wide spectrum of formal beliefs and cultural backgrounds found in religion a way to negotiate the restrictions of their outward lives and a radical source of personal and collective independence and value.

A History of America in 100 Maps Susan Schulten, 2018-09-21 Throughout its history, America has been defined through maps. Whether made for military strategy or urban reform to encourage settlement or to investigate disease, maps invest information with meaning by translating it into visual form. They capture what people knew, what they thought they knew, what they hoped for, and what they feared. As such, they offer unrivaled windows onto the past. In this book, Susan Schulten uses maps to explore five centuries of American history, from the voyages of European discovery to the digital age. With stunning visual clarity, A History of America in 100 Maps showcases the power of cartography to illuminate and complicate our understanding of the past. Gathered primarily from the British Library's incomparable archives and compiled into nine chronological chapters, these one hundred full-color maps range from the iconic to the unfamiliar. Each is discussed in terms of its specific features, as well as its larger historical significance, in a way that conveys a fresh perspective on the past. Some of these maps were made by established cartographers, while others were made by unknown individuals, such as Cherokee tribal leaders, soldiers on the front, and the first generation of girls to be formally educated. Some were tools of statecraft and diplomacy, and others were instruments of social reform or even advertising and entertainment But when considered together they demonstrate the many ways that maps both reflect and influence historical change Audacious in scope and charming in execution this collection of one hundred full color maps offers an imaginative and visually engaging tour of American history that will show readers a new way of navigating their own worlds
