Takashi's father gets a life insurance policy. The pressure mounts as her slick sales pitch pushes his mother to the brink of collapse. Sensing something amiss, Takashi arms himself with his inherited intellect and cocky demeanor to stand up to the tactful insurance peddling lady. A long-winded rant on cancer survival odds, an ill-favored insurance premium, and a clever ruse to profit from life insurance all lie in store for the Zaizen family. Get ready for volume 16, an eye-opening read that will make you question everything you think you know about insurance.

By March 2008 a total of 4.2 billion of projects had been approved in detail including grant support from the Council of 1.7 billion and about half of the estate had been renewed. Since April 2008 there has been a very serious failure in the management of the programme. It approved in principle 79 colleges projects which required nearly 2.7 billion of Council funding more than it could afford. Before the current problems arose the programme had achieved some successes enabling the estate to be reduced in size and the buildings are generally of good quality and are contributing to increased learner participation. The economic downturn could affect colleges' ability to fund projects by restricting their access to loan finance or their ability to sell surplus assets. The indebtedness of the sector is rising. The Council needs to monitor closely the financial health of some colleges particularly those that have borrowings that exceed 40 per cent of their annual income. In 2010 the Council is expected to be dissolved and its functions taken over by the Skills Funding Agency and the Young People's Learning Agency. There needs to be clarity about responsibilities for the capital programme and additional administrative burdens on colleges must be avoided.
