Chemoinformatics Jürgen Bajorath, 2008-02-04 In the literature several terms are used synonymously to name the topic of this book chem chemi or chemo informatics A widely recognized de nition of this discipline is the one by Frank Brown from 1998 1 who defined chemoinformatics as the combination of all the information resources that a scientist needs to optimize the properties of a ligand to become a drug In Brown s definition two aspects play a fundamentally important role de sion support by computational means and drug discovery which distinguishes it from the term chemical informatics that was introduced at least ten years earlier and described as the application of information technology to chemistry not with a specific focus on drug discovery In addition there is of course chemometrics which is generally understood as the application of statistical methods to chemical data and the derivation of relevant statistical models and descriptors 2 The pharmaceutical focus of many developments and efforts in this area and the current popularity of gene to drug or similar paradigms is further reflected by the recent introduction of such terms as discovery informatics 3 which takes into account that gaining knowledge from chemical data alone is not sufficient to be ultimately successful in drug discovery Such insights are well in accord with other views that the boundaries between bio and chemoinformatics are fluid and that these disciplines should be closely combined or merged to significantly impact biotechnology or pharmaceutical research 4
