The chapters provide a broad and extensive review that is written in an accessible form for scholars and students as well as educationalists, clinicians, and policy makers. The book covers the most important aspects of research on numerical cognition from the areas of development psychology, cognitive psychology, neuropsychology, and rehabilitation; learning disabilities; human and animal cognition; and neuroscience, computational modeling, education, and individual differences and philosophy. This book collects recent research on posing and solving mathematical problems. The contributors are from a vast variety of countries and with a wide range of experience; it includes the work from many of the leading researchers in the area and an important number of young researchers. The book is divided into three parts: one directed to new research perspectives and the other two directed to teachers and students respectively.
