Theoretical Approaches to Biological Control Bradford A. Hawkins,Howard V. Cornell,2008-10-14 Biological control is the suppression of pest populations using predators parasitoids and pathogens Historically biological control has largely been on a trial and error basis and has failed more often than it has succeeded However by developing theories based upon fundamental population principles and the biological characteristics of the pest and agent we can gain a much better understanding of when and how to use biological control This book gathers together recent theoretical developments and provides a balanced guide to the important issues that need to be considered in applying ecological theory to biological control It will be a source of productive and stimulating thought for all those interested in pest management theoretical ecology and population biology Grays Harbor Estuary Management Plan, Approval and Adoption D,Dapp,F; Grays Harbor Estuary Management Plan B1; Data Maps ,1987 Ecology in Action Fred D. Green Development provides a clear and coherent analysis of sustainable development in both theory and practice. Green Development explores the origins and evolution of mainstream thinking about sustainable development and offers a critique of the ideas behind them. It draws a link between theory and practice by discussing the nature of the environmental degradation and the impacts of development. It argues that ultimately green development has to be about political economy about the distribution of power and not about environmental quality. Its focus is strongly on the developing world. The fourth edition retains the broad structure of previous editions but has been updated to reflect advances in ideas and changes in international policy. Greater attention has been given to the political ecology of development market based and neoliberal environmentalism and degrowth. This fully revised edition discusses the origins of thinking about sustainability and sustainable development and its evolution to the present day the ideas that dominate mainstream sustainable development including natural capital the green economy market environmentalism and ecological modernisation critiques of mainstream ideas and of neoliberal framings of sustainability and alternative ideas about sustainability that challenge business as usual thinking such as arguments about limits to growth and calls for degrowth the
