

Controls

The receiver is housed in an attractive, strong plastic cabinet. Controls for operation are located on the top and front faces of the cabinet.

1. Aerial connector. This is a standard BNC type. It's operation is like a bayonet (push and twist) and is mounted on the top face of the cabinet. The supplied portable aerial may be connected to this point or a mobile / base.

2. VOL & POWER (volume) control. This is the inner knob of the dual concentric rotary controls located on the top face of the cabinet. It is used to set the required audio output from the receiver. When turned fully clockwise the volume is at maximum, when rotated anti-clockwise the volume is reduced to a minimum. At the fully anti-clockwise position the power ON/OFF switch is activated.

3. SQL (squelch) control. This is the outer knob of the dual concentric rotary controls located on the top face of the cabinet. The control is used to eliminate unwanted background noise on unoccupied frequencies. It is also used by the receiver to decide when to stop during scan and search modes.

The squelch control needs careful setting to achieve optimum operating performance. Rotate the control clockwise until the background noise just disappears, this is the most sensitive setting of the control. In practice the control is usually rotated a little further clockwise to avoid stopping on noise or very weak and unreadable signals. If the control is rotated too far clockwise then weak signals will be totally lost and only strong signals will be heard.

4. ATT (attenuator) switch. The switch has two positions marked as LOCAL and DX. For most situations the DX or long distance position is used where the receiver is at its most sensitive.

When operating the receiver in the presence of strong signals such as those from TV, broadcast, taxi, police etcetera, some interference may be experienced. This interference can take many forms such as an increase in background noise, desensitising of the receiver or mixing of many stations together. The cure for most of these effects is to use the attenuator switch in the LOCAL position. This reduces the level of signals reaching the receivers circuitry and helps the set cope with strong signals.

The addition of the attenuator switch to the receiver allows the set to be sensitive when required for weak signal listening and provide a reduction in overloading when necessary.

5. UP/DOWN (tuning) control. Located on the top face of the cabinet, this rotary control allows 'manual' tuning of frequencies displayed on the receiver. The control has a convenient click operation, the tuning increment can be programmed from the front panel keypad.

6. EAR (earphone or external speaker) socket. Located on the top face of the cabinet. This is a standard 3.5mm mono jack socket. Either an earphone or small external speaker may be connected, when in use the internal speaker is automatically disconnected. The impedance of an external device should be 8 OHMS or greater.
